COMMISSIONER PLEASONTON.

Suspension of the General by the President—Deputy Commissioner Douglass to Act as Internal Revenue Commissioner Ad Interim.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The suspension of Commissioner PLEASONTON from office, and the appointment in his place of the First Deputy, J. W. DOUGLASS, although expected, has created a good deal of excitement today in this otherwise quiet city. A great deal of surprise has been manifested at the delay in action which everybody foresaw must be sooner or later taken. This delay has been caused by requests of the Commissioner for more time, and the hesitation of the President to disgrace by removal an officer for whom he has entertained a warm friendship and a high regard. While the President is naturally disappointed that PLEASONTON'S administration should have been a failure, he has had no proof that the Commissioner was not honest in his intention. A week ago today the President wrote to ask his resignation, to which the answer was a plea for more time, which was allowed, evidently in the hope that reflection would cause compliance. Instead of using the time which he gained as in honor he should have used it, gained as it was from the President's personal kindness, the Commissioner went to work to complicate the affairs of the office as much as possible before he should be compelled to retire. These efforts have resulted as he must have expected, in a more speedy termination of his power. He wrote a letter to the President today reciting a conversation with Gen. PORTER last night, and stating reasons for not resigning. It shows that the President gave him an opportunity to resign, for reasons which would have done him no dishonor, but he does not choose to accept the opportunity. Besides this official letter, which, by the way, was given to the Press, not by himself, but by the authority of the President, he wrote to the President today a private note in which he assured the latter of his strong personal friendship, and pledged him his future support. The meaning of the Commissioner's action is plain, and threats which were traced back toward him are still plainer. He is going to attack Mr. BOUTWELL through the Press, and it is promised that the official integrity of the latter will be impeached. This was tried before in the story about the exchange or canceled bonds, and it is now tried again with a story about the stamp accounts, to which, of course, a few papers can be found to give currency. There is no disposition to place Commissioner PLEASONTON'S official record before the public unless his action and the action of those whom it is his misfortune to have for advisers invites such a display, and probably it will not be necessary, for the contemplated attacks on the Secretary are not coming from sources which will give them any credit. One of the last acts of the Commissioner, today, was to order the sending out of his bank-capital tax decisions, but he was informed that the copies could not be made in time.

THE SUCCESSOR.

Mr. J. W. DOUGLASS, who succeeds Gen. PLEASONTON as Commissioner, is a Pennsylvanian. He was appointed Collector of the Nineteenth District immediately after the Internal Revenue Bureau was created by Mr. LINCOLN, and has been connected with the service ever since he was appointed First-Deputy in April, 1869. He is a courteous, dignified gentleman, of spotless integrity, possessed of legal ability and experience, and fully acquainted with all the details of the Bureau. It will be remembered that his appointment was urged when Commissioner DELANO retired, and his designation for the position now is hailed by his friends as an act of justice.

THE STAMP ACCOUNT.

The new story about a deficiency in the stamp account of Secretary BOUTWELL, when he was Commissioner, is a very good match for the absurd story about the stealing of canceled bonds, and seems to emanate from the same source. So far as the stamp account is concerned, it is correct from the beginning, and shows no deficit against anybody. The following letter explains itself and the condition of Mr. BOUTWELL'S accounts referred to. In point of fact he had nothing whatever to do personally with the cash receipts of the office, though, of course, he was officially responsible. There could have been no diversions of these receipts without an extensive collusion, which could hardly have been concealed till this time. But the accounts are correct.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 4, 1871.

SIR: The act of 1862, establishing the Internal Revenue Office, made no provision for a cashier or the performance of the duties of such an officer, but left the work apparently in the hands of the Commissioner. It was of course physically impossible for the Commissioner to receive the money or perform the other duties incident thereto, and, after a consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury I invited Mr. MARSHALL CONANT to accept the office of clerk, with the understanding that he was to perform the duties of cashier. Mr. CONANT accepted the invitation, and on the 23d day of September, 1862, he entered upon the discharge of his duties, and remained in that position till the 1st of April, 1863. The act of March 3, 1863, authorized the appointment of a cashier, and Mr. ROLLINS was appointed to that office, but Mr. CONANT continued to perform the duties until the 1st of May, 1863. During that period he collected over $27,000,000 of revenue, much of which was paid in hand in currency, and his salary during that time amounted to $893 93. His accounts were audited and found correct, and after more than seven years no indication of error or wrong has appeared. I have always felt that Mr. CONANT was inadequately compensated, or rather hardly compensated at all, for the risk, responsibility and fidelity of the service performed by him. He is now old and in ill health, and unfortunate in investment about two years since of his small savings, amounting in all to about $5,000. This has deprived him of the means of support. Under these circumstances I think it entirely within the limits of propriety for me to call the attention of your Committee to Mr. CONANT'S case, and to suggest, should it be deemed by you proper to make further compensation for his services, that a provision be inserted in one of the appropriation bills appropriating not exceeding $5,000, to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to make further compensation to MARSHALL CONANT for his services as cashier in the Internal Revenue Office from Sept. 23, 1862, to April 1, 1863. Very respectfully,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL, Secretary.

To Hon. HENRY L. DAWES, Chairman Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

Last night Gen. PORTER, by direction of the President, called upon Gen. PLEASONTON with a verbal message, requesting him to resign his office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue. This Gen. PLEASONTON declined to do.

GEN. PLEASONTON'S LETTER.

The President this morning received the following letter from Gen. PLEASONTON:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE, Aug. 8, 1871.

TO THE PRESIDENT: In answer to your request, transmitted through Gen. PORTER, last evening, that I should tender my resignation of the office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue, I can only reply that, under ordinary circumstances, nothing would give me greater pleasure than to accede to any request you might make of this kind. But the cause for making this request was stated by Gen. PORTER to be the difference existing between the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. BOUTWELL, and myself, as regards the government and management of the Internal Revenue. Mr. BOUTWELL claims powers which, under the laws of Congress governing that Bureau, are vested solely in the Commissioners. The question is, therefore, purely a legal one, and the precedents of our Government have been to have such questions, when appealed to the President, referred to the law officer of the Government for his opinion, and upon which the President would base his decision. This course was pursued by Presidents JACKSON, TYLER, PIERCE, VAN BUREN, FILLMORE, and others, and has been the uniform practice of the Government. Knowing these facts, and believing this to be the proper way to settle any difference of view as regards the law which might exist between the Secretary and the Commissioner, I addressed you a communication some time since making an appeal for your decision of the powers of the Commissioner under the act of July 20, 1868. This appeal, as I understand it, is not to be entertained, but the subject is to be treated rather as a personal difference between the Secretary and myself. In this connection it is proper to add that the personal conduct of the Secretary has been such as to preclude the tender of my resignation until some opportunity is granted of vindicating my administration of the Internal Revenue Bureau. In justice to the public interests placed under my charge, and the importance to the tax-payers of a proper solution of these difficulties, I most respectfully decline to tender you my resignation; and trust that it will not be deemed inappropriate. I will again request that your present determination may be reconsidered, and an investigation of the matter of difference between the Secretary and myself be referred to the Attorney-General for his legal opinion.

With great respect,

A. PLEASONTON, Commissioner.

NOTICE OF SUSPENSION.

At 1½ o'clock, today, the President sent to Gen. PLEASONTON the following:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8, 1871.

You are hereby suspended from the office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue in accordance with the terms of an Act approved April 5, A. D. 1869, to amend an Act regulating the tenure of certain civil officers, passed March 2, 1867, and subject to all provisions of law applicable thereto. (Signed.) U. S. GRANT.

To Hon. A. PLEASONTON.

On receiving the notification Gen. PLEASONTON vacated the office, leaving for his successor the following note:

To J. W. Douglass, First Deputy Commissioner Internal Revenue Bureau:

SIR: Having this day been suspended from this office by the President, I turn the same over to you. Respectfully, (Signed,) A. PLEASONTON.

This letter was accompanied by a private note from Gen. PLEASONTON, expressive, it is said, of his devotion, friendship and support of the President in the future. Within two hours of the receipt of Gen. PLEASONTON'S communication, the President sent to him the notification of suspension, which was delivered by Solicitor BANFIELD and Mr. VANDERBILT, the Appointment Clerk in the Treasury Department. The immediate causes assigned in official quarters for the suspension of Gen. PLEASONTON are that the internal revenue was not collected with efficiency; that Gen. PLEASONTON reversed the rulings of his predecessors in several important particulars, and made decisions, the effect of which was unnecessarily to lessen the public receipts; acting independently of and not consulting with his superior officers as to these and other matters of administration, and that a change was necessary in order that there be harmony in the working of the Treasury Department.

MR. DOUGLASS' COMMISSION.

About 2 o'clock Mr. DOUGLASS entered upon the duties of the office, and received the congratulations of his friends. The following is his commission:

ULYSSES S. GRANT, President of the United States, to all who shall see these presents, greeting. Know ye that by virtue of the authority conferred upon the President by the second section of the act of Congress, approved April 5, 1869, entitled, an Act to amend an Act regulating the tenure of certain civil officers, I do hereby suspend ALFRED PLEASONTON from the office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue until the end of the next session of the Senate, and I hereby designate JOHN W. DOUGLASS to perform the duties of such suspended officer in the meantime, he being a suitable person therefor, subject to all the provisions of the law applicable thereto.

In testimony whereof I have caused these letters to be made patent, and the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed. Given under my hand at the City of Washington, the eighth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-sixth.

(Signed,) U. S. GRANT.

By the President.

J. C. BANCROFT DAVIS, Acting Secretary of State.

CUBA.

The Suspected Canadian Filibuster's Discharge—Counsel, of St. Albans Raid Notoriety, Compliments Them.

MONTREAL, Aug. 8.—The case of Major ROBINSON, in the Cuban Junta affair, resulted in the discharge of the accused. Judge COURSOL spoke strongly in dismissing the case. He carefully reviewed the evidence and the cross-examinations of the principal witnesses against ROBINSON. In concluding, the Judge said the Government was always perfectly ready to prevent any infringement of the Foreign Enlistment act or the Neutrality laws. He complimented the accused on his long and valuable services in the Dominion militia, and said he returned to the veteran Prince of Wales Rifles free from any blame, and honorably discharged.

Tunneling the Sierra Nevada.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—Col. VON SCHMIDTRAS closed a contract with the Central Pacific Railway to construct the Lake Tahoe tunnel through the Sierra Nevada, and sufficient in size for a canal and railway train. He is to complete the work in five years, the Railroad Company to pay a million dollars as its share of the cost.

Another Tornado in Wisconsin—Timber Booms, Houses and a Church Destroyed.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 8—A terrific tornado, moving from east to west, passed over Winneconne, Wis., last night. A boom on the Wolf River, five miles above Winneconne, containing fifty million feet of logs, was broken up. The steamer Star was capsized, and Capt. GEORGE SMITH drowned. One of the raftsmen was also drowned. Raft-houses were blown over and completely demolished, thousands of window panes broken, and thirty chimneys blown down. Grain in the shock was scattered over the fields, and all the corn is flat. The lumber interest suffers a great loss. The Roman Catholic church in Granville was destroyed by the storm.

THE BUFFENBURGH CASE.

Excitement in Cincinnati—Popular Feeling Divided—Confidence of Mrs. Colburn's Friends—The Family Physician's Statements.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—The Buffenburgh poisoning case, as it is already called, naturally excites great interest in this city, where all the parties concerned are well known. The fact that Mrs. COLBURN, the wife of the late Mr. PETER BUFFENBURGH, is now openly accused of having caused his death by administering arsenic, in order to gain undisputed possession of a portion of his large estate, leads many unthinking people to believe that the lady is really guilty. The more intelligent portion of the community, however, consider it only right to give the accused the benefit of all doubts until some specific evidence is presented against her. All sorts of rumors have been afloat concerning the developments in the case, but as yet there is no ground for any of them.

It may be remembered that some time prior to Mr. BUFFENBURGH'S death, he gave his wife a large farm for her personal property, and his death placed her in possession of one-third of his remaining property, valued at over $700,000. The other two-thirds also came under her control as guardian for her two children. This furnishes the ground for the accusation on the part of the other relatives of Mr. BUFFENBURGH, as they insist that the possession of the estate was the motive for the terrible crime of which Mrs. COLBURN stands accused. The poison said to have been used is arsenic, and the whole case turns upon that, for if none of that mineral poison is traced in the organs already submitted to analysis by the chemists, the accusation must fall to the ground, unless, indeed, that Prof. WORMLEY is prepared to say that there are other indications of poisoning.

A year after the death of PETER BUFFENBURGH, which event occurred in September, 1867, his wife married Mr. R. T. COLBURN, a journalist favorably known in your City and in this. Mrs. COLBURN was a Miss HUDSON when PETER BUFFENBURGH abandoned his bachelordom and entered the marriage state, at an age when most men are thinking of leaving this world altogether, and their union appeared quite happy. The very fact that PETER BUFFENBURGH died intestate, and especially in view of the fact that he knew himself to be dying, and never spoke of a last dying will and testament, argues strongly that his confidence in his wife was unshaken. The case has its mysterious aspects like all similar cases, for there is an undercurrent of suspicion that some illegal means have been resorted to to obtain or manufacture evidence against Mrs. COLBURN.

The failure of the Coroner's jury to meet yesterday, at London, only adds to the intensity of the excitement manifested in the case, and it is to be hoped that the gentlemen empaneled will be more prompt to-morrow.

Mr. and Mrs. COLBURN arrived at London yesterday, and were escorted to the residence of Judge CLARKE, until the examination takes place. Mrs. COLBURN'S numerous friends in the immediate neighborhood of her old residence, feel confident of her innocence and ability to defend herself from the charges made against her. A large number of witnesses have been notified to appear before the Coroner, and it is intimated that the testimony will be voluminous, and probably occupy one or more days in its hearing.

Dr. COLLINS was Mr. BUFFENBURGH'S family physician for about three years previous to his decease, and states that in his opinion the disease of which Mr. BUFFENBURGH died was consumption. The symptoms observed by him were such as were manifestly produced by the disease. During the latter part of his illness the patient expectorated very freely. That continued until about twenty-four hours previous to his death. If arsenic had been given to him it would have produced symptoms which the physician would have discovered. He informed Mrs. COLBURN weeks before his death that her husband must necessarily soon die. Dr. COLLINS also says that Mr. BUFFENBURGH always manifested the utmost confidence in his wife. She was very devoted and faithful in her attentions upon him.

THE INDIANS.

Details of the Recent Raid—Two Soldiers Killed—Condition of Affairs in Arizona—Roving Bands at Work.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Superintendent VIALL has presented to the Indian Bureau the details of the Indian raid on the 26th of July, the fact of which he announced by telegraph some days ago. He says the telegraphic statement of the loss of property is exaggerated, but he is sorry to say that two men were killed. The number of horses stolen will not exceed forty. The men killed were named NISARE and SHEPARD, and it is worthy of mention that they were not scalped, which goes to show that this party of Indians was a stealing party, and not a regular war party, as Indians on the war-path scalp their victims. It is generally believed that it was a party of Sioux on a stealing expedition. Col. BALEN, commanding Fort Ellis, is quite positive that it was a band of Sioux belonging to the Jelou tribe, under Chief SITTING BULL. The main camp is between Fort Peck and the Yellow Stone River, and they range over that country, extending as far as the Mussel Shell River on the east, and often wander as far north as the Milk River country. Superintendent VIALL again called the attention of the Department to the necessity of feeding these Indians, and says it is his firm belief, from the satisfactory result of feeding the Santee Sioux, at Milk River, that these Indians, under SITTING BULL, can be managed, and much good would be the result, and it would be a great saving to the Government in the end.

The War Department today furnished the Secretary of the Interior an official extract from the report of Col. CROOKE, commanding the Department of Arizona, relative to Indian hostilities in that territory, in which the latter says:

From the information I have obtained relative to the hostile Indians here, I learn that the main bands are the Pimahs and Coyeleros, and that south of these, and ranging down into Mexico and New-Mexico, are what is known as the Cochises band, their number being variously estimated at from eighty to three hundred warriors. This chief has the reputation of being very smart, and an uncompromising enemy to all civilization, and has such an influence over the two other tribes that their warriors are only too glad to join him in his numerous raids, besides making many on their own responsibility. It is against COCHISE'S band that I purpose concentrating all my energies for the present, feeling satisfied that no permanent peace can be had until this band is subjugated. I regret to learn from a New-Mexico newspaper that the Indian Agents in that Territory have been in this department, and induced the families of most of COCHISE'S band to go on a reservation in that country. If such is the case it will not only embarrass my present operations very much, but will greatly defer the finale subjugation of these Indians.

The COCHISE, spoken of by Gen. CROOKE, is an Apache Chief, whom Indian Commissioner VINCENT COLYER is now endeavoring to induce to visit Washington.

Love and Jealousy—A Naval Paymaster Shot in the Shoulder.

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 8.—FORD G. HALL, of Rochester, this afternoon shot Paymaster GOUVERNER K. KORTLAND, of the United States Navy, near BOGG'S Hotel. The ball lodged in the shoulder and inflicted a painful but not serious wound. A young lady of this city is involved in the affair, and the shooting is attributed to jealousy on the part of HALL.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Mr. Adams Accepts His Appointment as Arbitrator

Mr. Bancroft Davis to be American Counsel Before the Geneva Board—Secretary Fish—German Postage—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The paper here which has come to be known as a Tammany organ, which is said to be using up $5,000 per month of Tammany money in keeping its current expenses paid, came out this morning with an article in praise of CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, based on the false information of his refusal of the Office of Arbitrator at Geneva, which, it is said, he could not accept without indorsing the arbitrary conduct, abuses of power and venality of this administration. But today the State Department received a dispatch from Mr. ADAMS accepting the position. Owing to the false dispatch, a warm endorsement of the appointment was drawn out from a quarter most hostile to the administration. So Mr. ADAMS will go abroad with the approval of all parties. Mr. J. C. B. DAVIS, the Assistant Secretary of State, it is understood, will be the counsel or agent of this Government. Before the Geneva Board of Arbitration, of which Mr. ADAMS will be a member, Mr. DAVIS' connection with the Commission which framed the Treaty of Washington, as the Secretary of the American Commission, has given him such familiarity with the subject of our claims as, combined with his other eminent qualifications, would make his appointment, like that of Mr. ADAMS', to be arbitrator, especially fitting.

MR. FISH.

The old story about Secretary FISH'S retirement from the Cabinet hardly needs to be refuted, since it has been told so often and each time turned out false, that nobody would now believe it even if it were true. There is just as much foundation for it now as there was when it was first invented, and no more.

REPORTS FROM COMMANDER SELFRIDGE.

Commander SELFRIDGE has sent to the Navy Department his report upon the survey of the Tehuantepec Ship Canal route. This is one of the rejected routes, and the report is not, therefore, of great importance. During the Summer the report of the survey of the Darien route will be also filed.

CHEAP POSTAGE TO GERMANY.

The Post-office Department is negotiating with the German Post-office for a reduction of postage rates between the two countries to six cents instead of seven as now. Six cents is the rate by the new line to Stettin, which is only monthly; but it will probably be made the rate by all direct routes. The rate on letters going through England is ten cents, but this will probably be reduced to seven.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

GENERAL ORDER IN BALTIMORE.

The question having arisen at the Port of Baltimore as to the proper course for the Collector to pursue on the request for the issue of a general order for the discharge of imported merchandise from the importing vessels, it has been decided by the Secretary of the Treasury that the rule to be observed by the Collector in the discharge of vessels, unless it appears by the bills of lading that they are to be discharged immediately (act of Aug. 3, 1854,) should be this:

If no request is made for the general order, the merchandise should not be taken possession of by the Collector until after the expiration of eight, twelve, or fifteen working-days, as the case may be, according to the tonnage of the vessel, as specified in the act of March 2, 1861; but if the Master of the vessel or the importer apply for a general order to discharge the cargo, it would be desirable to issue it after the expiration of the day following such notice to the Collector, unless some special reason should dictate its refusal. This appears to be in harmony with the usage at other principal ports, and it is desirable that the practice should be uniform. Under this arrangement the Secretary says he cannot see that consignees should be embarrassed, as they would have sufficient time to make entries for warehouses or consumption, if they should so desire, before the discharge of the vessel would begin under the General Order.

BUFFALO RACES.

Brilliant Opening of the Meeting—Some Fine Trotting and Good Time Made.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 8.—The Buffalo Park Association had a most brilliant opening of the sixth annual meeting today. Early in the morning a heavy rain-storm prevented many persons in the surrounding country from attending, and for awhile the prospects were gloomy for a good attendance at the races. By noon, however, the sun shone out strong, and at the time for calling the horses the roads leading to the track and the track itself were in a superb condition, and the crowds came out. The number of visitors exceeded that of any previous opening day. There were fully 8,000 people present, and the condition of the track and its surroundings and the accommodations for the visitors could not be surpassed. The Police arrangement for the preservation of good order were excellent, and won praise from all in attendance. The horses were called promptly on time. There was but little scoring, and the races were closely contested, notwithstanding a stiff gale from the south-west swept the track. The horses entered for the three-minute race were new to the track, yet the fastest time on record was made for such a race.

Eleven horses were entered for the first race, and ten started. Lady Goldust was drawn. The following is a summary:

PURSE No. 1, $2,000.—For horses that have never trotted better than 3:00; $1,200 to first horse, $600 to second, $200 to third.

During this race the driver of Ida May was fined for preventing a start in the fourth heat. J. H. BURKE was fined for not keeping his position in the fourth heat. The following is a summary:

The third race, after trotting one heat, on account of the lateness of the hour, was postponed until to-morrow. Ten horses were entered and seven started. Major Allen won the first heat in 2:26¼. The pool-selling is very lively tonight at the turf head-quarters on to-morrow's race. The following are the average rates on the 2:30 trot: Susie, 80; Fiske, 60; Smith, 35; field, 31. In the unfinished 2:27 trot the pools sold: Harley, $50; Allen, $50; field, $30. The Ninth Regiment Band occupied a conspicuous stand in the track, and enlivened the occasion with excellent music. Chief-Engineer PERLEY, of New-York, Chief Engineer BATTLE, of Detroit, and Assemblyman FITZPATRICK, of Brooklyn, are receiving the courtesies of the Buffalo officials today.

KENTUCKY ELECTIONS.

Rioting Reported in Various Places—Two Whites Killed in Frankfort—Negro Prisoners Lynched.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 8.—A riot commenced here last evening after the closing of the polls. A short scuffle arose among several negroes, and two shots were fired. The police interfered, but were driven back, seventy or eighty shots being fired, and large stones and boulders thrown, &c. Two white men—Mr. WM. GILLMORE and Mr. BISHOP—were instantly killed, and three or four other white men wounded. Five or six negroes were wounded, but none killed. A crowd of negroes paraded the streets after the shooting. The State troops were ordered out, and are still under arms. The Federal troops were not called out. Toward midnight there was considerable excitement in the city. Young Mr. GILMORE, who was killed during the disturpance, was a master mason, and was extremely popular in the city. The leader of the negro rioters was captured. He has received several severe though not fatal wounds.

About 2 o'clock, before daylight had set in, a band of about 250 men, armed and wearing masks, went to the jail and knocked violently at the entrance. On the jailor appearing they demanded his keys. Alarmed at the savage aspect of his visitors, he complied, and, on obtaining the keys, they immediately proceeded to the cell of a negro who was lying in prison under a charge of rape committed on a Mrs. PFEIFFER. They seized him, and then went to another cell occupied by the negro who is said to have fired the first shot at the election riot last evening. Both prisoners were greatly terrified. The band then quitted the jail, taking both negroes with them. They hung them both at a spot only a few yards distant from the jail. When the affair became known, the greatest excitement followed. Young Mr. GILMORE, who was killed in the riot last night, will be sent to Lexington. The other white man, who was also killed, will be buried this evening. —Evening News.

The Troubles in Frankfort, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 8.—About 2 this morning about two hundred armed and masked men went to the jail in Frankfort and demanded the keys. The State Guard, who had been on duty there, had gone as it was supposed; all disorder was over. The jailer was compelled to surrender the keys, and the men entered and took out the negro who committed the rape on Mrs. PFEIFFER a few days ago, and also the negro WASHINGTON, who was said to be the one who fired the first shot in the riot there yesterday, in which two white men were killed. The negroes were taken about half a mile from the jail and hanged. Great excitement prevails in the community in consequence of the turbulent scenes yesterday evening and the lynching outrage this morning. No further violence is anticipated, however.

YACHTING.

The Stonington Regatta—Race at the Isle of Shoals—The Atlantic Yacht Squadron.

NORWICH, Conn., Aug. 8.—The annual Stonington regatta, open to vessels measuring fifty feet and less, took place today. There were seven prizes in silverware, and twenty-seven boats and yachts entered. The day, however, was foggy, and the first and third class boats rounded the wrong buoy, and will have to race again to-morrow. The second-class prizes were won by the Frolic and Mattie. The Atlantic Yacht Club Squadron, now in Stonington Harbor, will sail for New-York to-morrow.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 8.—Rev. GEORGE H. HEPWORTH'S yacht Ida, and Mr. WILLIAM DIXON'S yacht Bismarck sailed a race today from this city to the Isle of Shoals and return, a distance of twenty-four miles, the Ida winning in four hours seven minutes, beating Bismarck twenty-five minutes.

The Saratoga Regatta—Two Days of Racing on the Lake.

SARATOGA, Aug. 8.—The Saratoga regatta, for a purse of $3,500, will take place on the 9th and 11th prox. The following official announcement has been made public:

The grand Saratoga regatta will take place on Saratoga Lake, Sept. 9 and 11, 1871, under the following conditions: The four-oared race open to the world, four miles around a stake-boat, each crew to row in its own boat; the winner of the race to get $2,000, the second $1,250, and the third to get $750. Also, a single scull race, same distance, open to the world, each to row in his own boat; the winner to get $1,000, the second to get $500. The referee to have power to postpone in case of bad weather. All entries must be made by the 1st day of September. THE WEATHER.

Synopsis of Events and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9—1 A. M.—The barometer, after rising somewhat at the Rocky Mountain station since Monday night, is again falling. It has risen rapidly throughout the upper lakes, and an area of low pressure after developing over Lake Huron on Monday has moved very rapidly eastward, and is now beyond our stations. The pressure has risen in the Gulf States. The temperature has fallen decidedly on the lower lakes, and less so in the north-west and upper lakes. Fresh and brisk south-westerly winds have prevailed on the Atlantic coast. Light winds are now reported from Kentucky to Kansas and northward, and fresh north-westerly winds on Lakes Erie and Ontario. The area of local rains has moved rapidly eastward with the area of low barometer. Local storms have been experienced in the course of the day in Illinois and on the middle and east Atlantic coast, and to a less extent from South Carolina to Arkansas. Clear weather now prevails very generally east of the Mississippi.

PROBABILITIES.

The high barometer will probably continue until Wednesday evening throughout the Mississippi Valley, with increasing pressure and pleasant weather eastward to the Atlantic. Fresh winds from the south-west to the north-west will probably be experienced north and east of Pennsylvania, and lighter winds on the Lakes and in the South-western States.

The following observations show the temperature, &c., yesterday at the Central Park Mineral Springs, as recorded by SCHULTZ & WARNER:

Louisiana Republican Convention.

NEW-ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—There will be double delegations from all the parishes in the State, except eight or ten, which are represented by delegates friendly to WARMOUTH. In two or three wards of the city, where WARMOUTH delegates are elected, there are no contestants, and in all other wards there are double delegations; WARMOUTH'S friends claim a majority in the whole delegation, and say they will go into the Convention without tickets from the State Committee, and leave the question to be decided by a properly constituted Committee on Credentials. The Convention meets at 12 M. to-morrow in the United States Court-room in the Custom-house building.

St. Louis (Mo.) Election.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 8.—The election here today for County-Judge and Auditor passed off quietly. CHARLES SPECK, Democrat, for Presiding Justice, has about 1,500 majority in the city. The county will probably run it up to 1,800. WILLIAM H. HEATH, Republican, for Auditor has between 700 and 800 majority in the city. Of District Judges from the city, JOHN H. FISHE and PHILIP STREMMEL, Republicans, are elected, and JOHN D. FINNEY, JOHN BUSSEY, Democrats. There are not enough returns from the county districts to determine the result, but it is probable that JOSEPH L. HYATT, Democrat, and ROBERT ALLEN, Republican, are elected.

The North Carolina Election.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—Gen. ALLEN RUTHERFORD, Third Auditor, has returned today from North Carolina. He estimates the Republican majority in that State at from 10,000 to 12,000 sure.

ENGLISH AFFAIRS.

The Goodwood Races—Their Effect on Parliament—Legislative Shortcomings—The House of Lords—Significance of the Exercise of the Royal Prerogative—Purchase in the Army and in the Church.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, July 29, 1871.

It would be ascribing too much knowledge of human nature and worldly craftiness to Mr. GLADSTONE to suppose that he took Goodwood into his calculations when he defied the Lords and abolished the purchase of officers' commissions by a single stroke of the pen. Unquestionably, however, Goodwood has had a most important influence in dispelling the danger of a collision between the two Houses, and in tiding over smoothly what is really a great constitutional crisis. At another time the Lords would have met the act of the Ministry by an instant and furious retort while they were in the very white heat of passion. Words would have begot words, the quarrel would have been magnified and intensified, and a great deal of wanton mischief would have been done. As it is, Goodwood has given the Lords time to sleep on the matter, and it is already evident that they have let slip the occasion for flying into a passion. That is a thing one must do at once or not at all. And what, it may be asked, is this Goodwood which has produced such blessed results? Is it the name of a saint, or is it a great festival of the Church, or some new-fangled function of human brotherhood and mutual affection? Not at all. Goodwood means simply the Goodwood horse races. Goodwood is a country-seat of the Duke of RICHMOND, (leader of the House of Lords, and descendant of the notorious Duchess of PORTSMOUTH, CHARLES II.'s French mistress,) on the Sussex coast, and the race-course runs across the estate. The Duke always throws open his palace at this season to a distinguished company, and the races are the most fashionable of the year. This week he had the Prince of WALES and Duke of CAMBRIDGE among his guests. The Imperial Prince of Germany and Prince ARTHUR were lodged with Prince EDWARD of Saxe-Weimar, brother of the late Prince Consort. A list of the company at large would read like so many pages torn from the Court Guide. That this should be a great aristocratic festival is reasonable enough. The races are usually very good, and a more beautiful situation for such sport could not be imagined. But it is surely going too far to say that important public business must be set aside to make way for an amusement of this kind. There is to my mind a melancholy significance in the fact that on an occasion when the authority of the House of Lords is slighted, and its very existence as an essential and independent branch of the Legislature is called in question, the majority of the Peers should be content to let things slide rather than miss the races. There are some things about this country which must seem very amazing and incomprehensible to the inhabitants of other lands, and which one day, I dare say, will excite some wonder even here. Among these most certainly is reckoned the adjournment of the House of Commons, no matter what business may be on hand, in order that the members may go to Epsom on the day of the Derby race; the suspension of the most serious questions that could be imagined between the Government and the House of Lords, because of the paramount and engrossing interest of Goodwood, to which everything else must give way, and the closing of the Legislature for the year, whether or not it has done its appointed work, and regardless of the urgency of public affairs, is the middle of August, so that the members may be off to their grouse shooting on the Highland moors. This year, for example, the two most pressing matters were the reorganization of the army and the establishment of a sound and efficient system of sanitary supervision. The late war gave a warning as to the former, and now the cholera is supposed to be coming to give a fright about the latter. Yet both these important measures have been mutilated and curtailed, and will be passed in a most imperfect form, simply on account of the assumed want of time to do justice to them—an assumption which means in other words that the one essential thing in this country is that the upper ten thousand should be allowed to go off to shoot grouse the instant the grouse are ready to be shot, and that everything else—the national safety, the public health, no matter what—must give way to the first principle of a glorious constitution!

THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

The Radical papers are writing in a very revolutionary manner about the House of Lords, and there can be no doubt that the abolition of purchase by royal warrant, and in defiance of the Peers, is destined to exercise a very important influence on the part which the Upper House will in future be allowed to play in public affairs. When a thing of this sort has been done once it is certain to be done again. The repetition of the act does not depend merely on the will of the Ministry. The next time a question arises between the two Houses, there will be a demand for the exercise of the royal prerogative in order to cut the knot. Even if with a little trouble the knot can be untied, there will always be an impatient section of the public ready to cry out that it must be cut. And whether the Government like it or not, it is probable they will have to yield. Mr. GLADSTONE has shown that the assent of the House of Lords is not essential to a most important change in the public service, and the lesson will not be thrown away upon his more impetuous and "advanced" supporters. It is certainly very different to know how the existence of a fixed, permanent body like the House of Lords, is to be reconciled with the general principles of Parliamentary government, which imply that the vote of the majority of the people shall be paramount and absolute, and shall override everything else. It is quite clear that, under such circumstances, the opposition of the Lords should be offered only when they have reason to believe that public opinion is on their side, or at least, if time were allowed for further examination and reflection, it would come round to them. But this is a rule which it must be left to the discretion of the Lords to carry out; and if they either repudiate it or make a mistake, what is to be done?

PURCHASE IN THE ARMY.

As soon as the system of selling commissions in the army was seriously attacked, it was certain that it must go down, and even those who have been defending it must have known that they were engaged in a forlorn hope. Indeed, at the last, the officers themselves became alarmed, and used all their influence in favor of, instead of against, the bill. They were afraid that if they did not accept the terms now offered, they would never again have the chance of such a good bargain. The amount of compensation to be awarded to the officers will be determined by officials specially appointed for the purpose, but the current value of commissions is well known already, and may be reckoned as follows:

LIFE GUARDS.

Lieutenant-Colonel	£7,250	Lieutenant	£1,785
Major	5,350	Cornet	1,260
Captain	3,500

HORSE GUARDS.

Lieutenant-Colonel	£7,250	Lieutenant	£1,600
Major	5,350	Cornet	1,260
Captain	3,500

FOOT GUARDS.

Captain, (with rank of Lieutenant-Colonel)	£4,800
Lieutenant, (rank of Captain)	2,050
Ensign, (rank of Lieutenant)	1,200

CAVALRY AND INFANTRY OF THE LINE.

Lieutenant-Colonel	£4,500	Lieutenant	700
Major	3,200	Cornet or Ensign	450
Captain	1,800

It should be explained that there is a distinction between the household troops, or guards as they are generally called, and the regiments of the line. The former spend most of their time in and around London, are never sent out of the country, except in the case of a great war like the Crimean, draw higher pay, and take rank before the line. It is supposed to be a mark of social superiority to have a commission in the guards; and even the men are held to be a better class than their brethren of the line. The private troopers of the guards are formally addressed as "Gentlemen of the Life Guards." The line regiments represent the working part of the army, which is shifted about from one dull country garrison to another, and every now and again shipped across the seas for a spell of Indian or colonial service. The scientific branches of the army—the artillery and engineers, as well as the marines (which last are reckoned rather with the navy than the army,)—are non-purchase corps. I should add that in the purchase corps, officers on their promotion from one grade to another, pay the difference in value between the two grades. Above the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel there is no purchase.

PURCHASE IN THE CHURCH.

Out of England it must seem very extraordinary that the people should have continued so long to allow the sale of officers' commissions but, perhaps, it is still more extraordinary that the sale of clerical livings should also have survived, even in the teeth of the law against simony. In the course of the recent debate in the House of Lords, Lord SANDHURST declared that it was impossible that the commander of a regiment could secure the respect and confidence of his men when they knew that he was dangling them for sale, and was ready to dispose of them to the highest bidder. But what shall be said of a clergyman in a similar situation? If the marketing of military commissions is bad, how much worse must be the huckstering of holy things and the sale of the cure of souls? Yet the shameful traffic still goes on, openly and briskly. Here are one or two advertisements which I cut from the first newspaper that comes to my hand—it is the Times of this morning:

ADVOWSONS FOR SALE.—Little Warley Rectory, three miles from Brentwood, and eighteen from London. Net income over £300, besides good residence. Duty very light. Also, East Horndon Rectory, near the above. Net income, £350. Duty light. Particulars of Mr. ——, No. 10a Old Broad-street, London, E. C.

ADVOWSON OF A VALUABLE RECTORY FOR SALE, with immediate legal possession, situate within fifteen miles of town, and of the yearly value of about £1,000. There is a very good and commodious residence, on grave soil, and the parish is very healthy.

CHURCH PREFERMENT.—Mr. —— will forward on the application of principals or solicitors full particulars of all advowsons and presentations for sale, including his latest instructions. Incomes range from £100 to £1,200 a year; details being reserved, by his instructions for limiting public announcements.

PREFERMENT WANTED TO PURCHASE.—Mr. W. Emery Stark, F. R. G. S., &c., has instructions from some 200 or 300 clients desirous of purchasing church preferment, and he will be glad to receive confidential communications from solicitors or their solicitors. References can be given in every county and diocese.

A good house in a pleasant country, light duty and a handy trout stream are the attractions on which emphasis is usually laid in these advertisements, and sometimes even shooting and hunting are pretty broadly hinted at. In another paper I find it announced that the rectory of the town of Sevenoaks is to be sold by auction on the 8th of August. It appears from the "particulars" that there is a capital rectory-house, and that the commuted tithes of the parish, including the extra charge on hops, amounts to £1,294 10s. per annum, making together, with the value of the glebe, fees, &c., an income of about £1,500 a year. It is added that a presentation may be expected at no very distant date; that the present rector is seventy-seven years of age.

FRANCE AND ALGERIA.

The Progress of Disaffection Toward the Home Government—The Situation.

Algiers Correspondence of the London Daily News.

Yesterday I called upon an influential person who has resided for years in Algeria, and who knows the place perhaps better than any man living, and, in the course of some conversation I had with him, he expressed himself in much the following manner. I need hardly say that he holds an important position in the Government of Algeria, and can therefore hardly be considered as impartial. "Last July," he said, "the native population of Algeria was in a perfect state of tranquility, order having only been troubled by a handful of irreconcilable insurgents, who had attempted, without much success, a few insignificant raids in the south-west of the province of Oran. The declaration of war with Prussia did not in any way change the attitude of the country. Vanquished by the French, the population believed in their superiority. The Crimean and Italian campaigns, in which they had mingled their blood with that of their conquerors, strengthened this conviction, and the constant news in the success of France was not even shaken by the defeat of Reischoffen, which inspired only a desire to avenge the Algerian regiments decimated in the opening battles of war. At this time a real enthusiasm was manifested among the Arabs, from which the Government might have derived great advantage. A vain attempt was made to revive this spirit after Sedan. The proclamation of the Republic, the very name of which since 1848 had been synonymous in Algeria with disaster and anarchy, the agitation among the public, the accession to the chief power of Commissaires of the Republic whose obscure names were totally unknown to the Arabs, and who were wanting in that prestige which the military character conveyed; all these were subjects of trouble and perplexity to a people accustomed to the principle of authority. The fate of the Empire produced sincere regret among the great chiefs who had been the honored guests of NAPOLEON III. At the same time the furious articles in the journals, and the proposition of the colonists attacking them violently, filled them with fears for their own positions. The Governments of Tours and Bordeaux did all in their power to alienate them by inopportune and impolitic measures. The naturalization of Jews and Arabs had been rendered easy by Imperial legislation; but it was optional with all to be so naturalized previous to Sept. 4, when the initiative of M. CRÉMIEUX conferred naturalization en masse on his co-religionists in Algeria; and a decree instituting trial by jury rendered the Arab liable to be tried by these few Frenchmen, but maintained the exclusion pronounced against the Mohammedans. We may imagine the effect produced by these acts on the spirit of the Mussulman races, among whom hatred of the Jew is a tradition and almost a religious duty. Thus during Mussulman rule in Algeria the Jews suffered every kind of torment. They could not walk in the streets after 6 o'clock at night without obtaining a special authorization from the police. If the night was dark, instead of carrying a lantern, like the Turks and Moors, they had a lighted candle, which the wind blew out continually. They were obliged to take off their shoes on passing before a Mosque, and to kneel before the Kasba. Jews could only address a Mussulman with deference and submission, they moved off the pavement to allow the latter to pass, and any infraction of these customs was punished with bastonado and fines. They could not ride on horseback and could not even enter the town on a donkey. An insult toward a Mussulman was punished by sudden death, inflicted arbitrarily, and often according to the offended Moor's caprice, who, in the event of a reprimand, paid a fine to the Government, but rarely to the victim's relations. The effect of the favor which the Jews enjoyed after the Government of Sept. 4 was intensified by the creation of special Jewish regiments of militia, the members of which paraded the streets of Algiers in gaudy uniforms to the sound of military music, in the presence of the Mohammedans. On the other hand, the officers of the Arab bureau had almost all quitted their posts for active service in France, and their places were hastily supplied by retired military officers or by capitulés, who were reviled by the entire French population, and by whom they were deprived in advance of all prestige or authority. The old system of administration was modified by decrees which were only partially carried out, but which created trouble and mistrust at a moment when prudence should have imposed the greatest caution and the most perfect accord. The danger of the situation, however, was not perceived save by the few far-sighted observers. The newspapers continued to affirm that Algiers, far from dreaming of insurrection, was ready to furnish 50,000 men to France, and demanded to be sent to the war to the last soldier. But in spite of the most pressing invitations, recruiting hung fire, and the authorities had to employ the strongest inducements to succeed in raising a regiment of a few hundred horsemen. This failure was attributed to the Arab bureau, the past faults of which served as texts for the bitterest recriminations. Toward the middle of March a first indication of the possible consequences of these faults occurred. This was a riot between the Jew Franco-Tirents and the Arab corporation of Berranis or strangers, at Algiers, and a judgment which condemned one of the latter to a slight fine. His companions armed themselves with sticks and knives and fell upon the Jews in the open day, pillaging their shops, and wounding some of them severely. The militia were called out, ammunition was supplied to them, and the affair was promptly and energetically suppressed. This was necessary, but it had the effect of spreading exaggerated reports among the tribes, which the immediate disbanding of the Jewish corps did not suffice to disprove, accusing the French of partiality toward the Israelites; and this was an accusation of which the malicious were not slow to avail themselves. The disorganization of the public departments and the absence of troops, which were replaced by Mobiles and Mobilisés, badly disciplined, and often badly equipped, could not but have the effect of weakening authority. At Algiers the Arabs did not interfere directly with the French, but they profited by their weakness, spreading disaffection from tribe to tribe, and from confederation to confederation.

"NEW-IRELAND."

An English Statement of the Condition of New-York.

From the London Times, July 28.

It appears that the "Catholic Irish" of New-York claim, without the least disguise, and almost possess, the Government of the City in all social and political matters. They are the numerical majority in a place where the numerical majority is the governing power, and that power they exercise without scruple or stint, and with the greatest possible annoyance to the feelings of the minority. The Orange faction is only one of the many victims of this social tyranny. The Irish equally hate, proscribe and crush the colored men, the Germans, the Italians, and anybody whatever who lifts up his head at New-York and has a way of his own. Their own demonstrations are on a stupendous scale, filling the City, and more imposing every year, with banners, devices, insignia and arms. In fact, they claim the streets as their own, and will allow nothing to appear in them that is not quite to their liking. This, too, is only the outside point and glory of a real and very oppressive and grinding dominion. They are the masters of New-York, and they rub the fact into the face and eyes of every man in the City. Their fellow-citizens, many of them long too backward in political and municipal affairs, have at last come to the conclusion that they must assert their personal liberty, or lose it altogether. They do not care much for the Orangemen; but they see that the many are interested in the right of the few, and that, if the Orange parade is to be stopped by mob law, that will soon be the fate of every other. The question itself is a pretense. Accordingly, they are standing out for the right to regulate these matters on public principles recognized by all, and it is at least possible they may find they have to struggle hard for liberty and law.

SPAIN.

The Ministerial Crisis and Its Result—Zorrilla's New Ministry—The Past of Serrano and Sagasta.

Madrid (July 27) Correspondence of the London Times.

The Ministerial crisis has at length been surmounted, but in a most unexpected manner. Gen. SERRANO, clinging with desperate tenacity to the coalition idea, worked with might and main to form a Cabinet, as before, of the three parties who compose the majority, and on Sunday morning it was officially announced that he had succeeded in this. So undoubted was this that I had no hesitation in telegraphing you the names of the Ministry. Difficulties, however, sprang up in the course of the day with the two latter, in consequence of which Gen. SERRANO went to the Palace and informed His Majesty that he had determined to abandon all further attempts to form a Ministry. His Majesty sent for RUIZ ZORRILLA, who since the death of PRIM has been considered as the chief of the Progresista Party. After a long conference with His Majesty, in which he expounded his views as to the policy he should aim at, Zorrilla set out for the purpose of forming a Ministry, and which policy would be very different from the programme Gen. SERRANO had presented a few days before. ZORRILLA set resolutely to work, and yesterday afternoon Madrid was astonished and not a little gratified by the announcement of a purely Progresista Ministry: President of the Council and Minister of Foreign Relations, RUIZ ZORRILLA; Minister of War, Gen. CORDOVA; Minister of Marine, BERANGER; Minister of Fomento, MADRAZO; Minister of Grace and Justice, MONTERO RIOS; Colonial Minister, MOSQUERA; Minister of Finance, RUIZ GOMEZ. It will thus be seen that Gen. SERRANO retires completely from the cares of office. This cannot fail to be grateful to him. It is the accomplishment of a desire he has frequently expressed, both in public and in private. It must have been difficult for him to descend from the comparatively retired post of the Regency right into the confused arena of political strife. Manfully did he rush to the breach when the assassins had struck down Gen. PRIM, and carefully has he tried to navigate the Ship of State during the first half-year of the new Monarch's reign. Pitilessly and unmeritedly has he been assailed by "the Oppositions" at every step he took. Much has he had to irritate him, much to distress him. But in the midst of all, through good report and evil report, the DUKE DE LA TORRE has exhibited the noblest qualities a statesman could display—a complete sacrifice of his personal ease and convenience to the good of the country, and a patriotism which has enabled him to look beyond all party considerations to the accomplishment of that good in the consolidation of the dynasty. He retires into the position of a simple Senator, with the gratitude and the good-will not only of His Majesty King AMADEO, but also of every Spaniard inside or outside the Cortes who is not blinded by political rage or party passion. In all that relates to true progress I am sure the new Ministry will receive a loyal support from him, and should occasion arise his sword and his services will ever be ready at his country's call. * * * The assumption of the War Department by hands other than those of one of the leaders of the revolution is a new feature. Poor PRIM would as soon have given up his life as given up that office to any except SERRANO or TOPETE. Gen. CORDOVA is highly respected, and I have little doubt, the ice once being broken in respect of the occupancy of the War Ministry by a Revolutionary General, the way will be paved even for an introduction of the civil element into that as well as other high offices of State. Spain would be none the worse off for the complete elimination of the military element from her Governments. The Militars ought to be servants, not leaders of the State.

CHOLERA.

The Dread Pilgrim on the March—Precautions Advised.

From the London Lancet.

The rumored extension of cholera from Russia into the Baltic Provinces of Prussia has very naturally caused alarm lest the malady should again spread to West Europe and thence to this country. The news requires confirmation; and much of the alarm depends upon a mistaken notion of the rapidity of diffusion and direction of progress of the epidemic. One account describes the disease as having made its way in the familiar cholera route, from Persia through Russia to the shores of the Baltic; and the Registrar-General, in his last weekly report, writes that—"Asiatic cholera (as it was a painful duty to announce early last June) is entering Western Europe through Russia, where Dr. ZUELZER says, it is fast advancing on the German frontiers. In the second week of this month it broke out in Wilkowyski (a town in Poland, on the road to Konigsberg, west of the Niemen,) where thirty-four deaths occurred within a few days. The epidemic has prevailed in Wilna for four weeks, and from ten to fifteen deaths are reported daily. At its present rate of progress it may reach Germany in two or three weeks." The progress of the present epidemic of cholera in Russia and its relation to epidemic cholera in Persia, have formed a study of altogether exceptional interest to epidemiology; and the different facts throwing light upon the subject, particularly upon the chronological succession of the more important local outbreaks in the two countries, have been systematically reported in the pages of the Lancet. The existing epidemic in Russia (apparently a recrudescence of the epidemic of 1869) began in December, 1869. In the course of that month the disease appeared at Oral, in the Government of Smolensk, and in the City of Moscow. During the earlier months of 1870 the malady prevailed slightly in the localities named; but in July and August it spread widely in the south-eastern districts of Russia in Europe, and throughout the Autumn it was more or less prevalent in many Russian ports of the Black Sea. On the 29th of August, 1870, the epidemic broke out in St. Petersburg; and from that date to the 8th inst. there had been not less than 5,330 cases of the disease in that city, of which 2,178 had died. On the 8th July there were 330 cases reported to be under treatment. From St. Petersburg the disease has been scattered in various directions in West Russia; and it was present in Wilna in April. The epidemic is now prevalent more or less at various parts in West, Central and East Russia, in Europe. The protracted duration of this epidemic in Russia, and its limitation to the present time (so far as Europe is concerned) to the provinces of that Empire, is a phenomenon of very remarkable interest in the history of the epidemic diffusions of cholera. From the close of 1869, the presence of the epidemic in Russia, we have reason to know, has been a source of constant anxiety to the officials of the Privy Council Office, whose duty it is to watch over the health welfare of the kingdom, and we ourselves have spared no pains to bring the different facts which would throw light upon the probable future of the epidemic to the knowledge of the profession. As yet we have no certain information that the malady has become actively migratory, and that it has extended across the Russian frontier into West and Central Europe. But that this danger is imminent, and has been imminent at any period since the Winter of 1869 is certain; and it is well that the daily Press should have raised the question of the state of our protectedness against the epidemic. Upon this question we do not propose now to dwell further than to remark that it is one upon which no doubt can rest as to the duties of the local authorities who are responsible for the administration of the Sanitary laws.

PAPAL INFALLIBILITY.

What Pius IX. Himself is Credited With Saying.

On July 23 the Pope received the Accademin di Religione Cattolica, the President of which is Cardinal ARQUINT. Father ORINO, the Secretary of the Academy, read an address, to which, says the Florence Nazione, the Pope made the following important reply: Among the subjects which will employ your labors, there is one with which I recommend you to specially occupy yourselves. The attempts that are being made to misrepresent the idea of the Pontifical infallibility must be opposed. It is insinuated that among the rights which spring from that infallibility is that of deposing Sovereigns and of releasing the people from the oath of fidelity. It is true that this right has been more than once exercised by the Supreme Pontiffs; but it has no direct connection with the infallibility of the Popes, nor with the dogmatic definition of that infallibility. The source of the right of the Roman Pontiffs to depose Sovereigns, and to release the people from the obligation of fidelity does not arise from infallibility, but from the authority that has been given to the Vicar of Jesus Christ upon earth and in heaven. When, in virtue of the public law then in force, and of the understanding of the Christian nations, the Popes were considered as the supreme judges of Christianity, they exercised also a civil jurisdiction over Princes and States. The condition of the times are now changed, and only malice could confound the infallible decisions of the Pontiffs in matters of faith, with a right which they were formerly called upon by the voice of the people to exercise for the common welfare, but which the Supreme Pontiff in the present day has no intention of exercising. It certainly is not the dogmatic definition of the infallibility of the Popes that would decide me to put in force those rights; and those who represent their exercise as the necessary consequence of such definition, certainly wish to excite the Sovereigns against the Holy See. Others wish for explanations and elucidations respecting the dogmatic definition, as though it were not sufficiently clear of itself. I certainly shall give none. The sense of the dogmatic definition of the Pontifical infallibility is to be found in the decree of the Council, and is so simple and obvious as to need no comment. Combat, therefore, the errors with which it is sought to obscure and misrepresent this very natural interpretation.

FOREIGN NEWS NOTES.

A farewell conversazione of the spiritualists of England had been held at St. George's Hall, Langham-place, in honor of Mrs. EMMA HARDINGE, previous to her departure for America. Mr. GERALD MASSEY presided.

The foreign papers announce the death of CARL TAUSSIG, the eminent pianist, and of M. D. SAINT-YOES, a French dramatic author and writer of historical romances.

A telegram from Constantinople, published in Die Presse, of Vienna, states that the Turkish troops which were operating against the insurgents of the Nedjid, have been obliged, although victorious, to quit the district, owing to the ravages of the cholera.

Mlle. Catherine de Montalembert, one of the five daughters of the Count, has just taken the veil at the Convent of the Sacré-Cœur, at Laval (Mayenne). One of the sisters had already entered on a religious life during the lifetime of her father, to his great regret.

The Bishop of Quimper, M. SERGENT, has died suddenly in a railway wagon while returning to his diocese. The Bishop of Amiens, who happened to be traveling in the same train, was able to give his colleague the customary absolution.

The death is announced of EDITH MARY, the daughter of the poet SOUTHEY, and wife of Rev. JOHN WOOD WARTER, B. D., of Christ Church, Oxford, rector of West Tarring, near Worthing, who edited SOUTHEY'S Doctor, and gave to the public his Common-place Book and Letters. Mrs. WARTER was the daughter of SOUTHEY'S first wife, and was born in 1805. Mrs. SOUTHEY died in 1837, and in 1839 SOUTHEY was married to CAROLINE BOWLES, the poetess.

During the siege of Strasburg 553 soldiers and 289 civilians, or 842 persons in all, were killed or died in consequence of their wounds. In the months of August and September the rate of mortality rose to two and one-third per cent., while in the same months of 1869 it only stood at five-eighths per cent. In the course of the siege 1,735 deaths occurred within the walls of the city.

Baron STOFFEL has not been arrested for having published the criticisms on the Franco-German affairs in the preface of his late work, as has been stated. The French Government has, nevertheless, resented the remarks made, and the military authorities have been considering the expediency of bringing the author under the penalties to which he is liable, but it has been thought better to leave to the judgment of the public the truth of the sweeping accusations which he has made.

A telegram dated Berlin, July 26, states that the Government has assigned a chapel at Kuttowitz to the priest KAMINSKI, who was excommunicated recently for refusing to submit to the infallibility dogma, for the celebration of mass for the anti-infallibility party. The Minister of Worship, VON MUHLER, before leaving Berlin for Salzburg, issued a general order to the Provincial Governments to report to him on his return upon the political agitations undertaken in their districts by the clerical party.

The vault of MARY DE COUCI, Queen of ALEXANDER II. and mother of ALEXANDER III. of Scotland, who was buried at Newbattle Abbey about the middle of the thirteenth century, is now supposed to have been discovered. The vault was discovered in the floor at the south corner of the crypt, which must have been a magnificent hall when entire, as the present entrance-hall of the abbey goes right across the middle of it.

Mr. SPURGEON has now, it is said, printed 1,000 of his sermons, of which 20,000,000 copies have been distributed in the English language alone. Some of the sermons have been translated into all the languages of Christendom. He has recently resumed preaching, after an enforced silence of several weeks, but is still in a feeble state of health. The other day he told his congregation that each pulpit-effort costs him at least forty-eight hours' pain.

The Karlsruher Zeitung says: "On Aug. 21 a melancholy accident occurred at the waterfall of Schaffhausen, on the Rhine. A Russian lady, who was most probably a practised and skillful swimmer, undertook the foolhardy feat of swimming above the fall beyond reach of the safe bathing-houses. She was dragged into the current, and disappeared in the roaring torrent of the waterfall. There was no possibility of saving her. The body was recovered further down the river."

A Paris correspondent makes known one of the latest bon mots attributed to AUBER. ROSENBERGER, the enthusiastic manager of the Concerts Populaires, visited him a short time before his death, and shook hands with the master. AUBER said to him, with one of his sardonic smiles: "You are as fond as ever of music, I see?" "I scarcely can be so fond of it as you, cher maître, whom the muse so often inspired!" "Well! Yes. I loved my muse until I was thirty-two years old. It was my youthful passion. I had not yet let the world into the secret. She was my mistress then, and I loved her. But afterward she became my wife," added the old bachelor, with a significant shrug.

The return of the public to the gardens of the Tuileries was marked by as much sadness as joy. Most of the statues are defaced or wholly destroyed. The colossal figure of Peace, by CHAUDET, is burned by petroleum; the statue of Agrippina has lost her head and her right arm; Cybele points with the stump of her left arm to the missing skirt in which her missing right arm once held sundry fruits of the earth, now missing likewise; PRADIER'S Prometheus is but little injured, while the Serpent-Charmer, dedicated by CLESINGER to the Prince Imperial, belonging to the Jardin Réservé, was found literally riddled with shot, hacked with bayonets, and otherwise mutilated in the most disgraceful manner.

A recent letter from Milan in the Cologne Gazette says that Prof. MOMMSEN, during his late stay in Italy, requested the TRIVULZIO family at Milan to lend him a valuable manuscript collection of all the Latin inscriptions in Italy, of which they have the only extant copy. Count TRIVULZIO'S reply to the distinguished German scholar was that the work was entirely at his disposal, but only in the library. Family traditions forbade him to permit its removal elsewhere. Some days since Count TRIVULZIO received an autograph letter from Prince BISMARCK, in which he renewed the application of Prof. MOMMSEN, and pledged himself that the manuscript would be returned. The Count could not oppose the request of the Imperial Chancellor, and the book is now in the hands of Count BRASSIER DE ST. SIMON, who has undertaken to send it to Count BISMARCK.

The Berlin Post observes that the refusal of England to send a representative to the Customs Conference, in August, in Berlin, to which the Imperial Government had invited the different European States, has caused a good deal of surprise in our commercial circles. The main object of the proposed Conference is to arrive, if possible, at an improved system of classifying goods in Customs tariffs, and a simplification of Custom-house business at the various frontiers—matters in which, as it is generally acknowledged, there is still great scope for an alteration. It was supposed that a great commercial State like England would hail with no less pleasure than ourselves any attempt to facilitate international intercourse, and the refusal of that country to take part in the Conference can be attributed only to the chagrin of the Board of Trade that the initiative of such important reforms should have been taken by Germany.

A light-house is about to be erected on Turnberry Point, in Ayrshire. It will occupy the site of part of the ancient castle of King ROBERT BRUCE. No more fitting memorial of that monarch could be erected on the spot, for it was there that the fire was seen by him from the Isle of Arran, which, being mistaken for an appointed signal, brought him prematurely over to the mainland with his handful of followers to attempt the deliverance of his country, as related by BARBOUR, Sir WALTER SCOTT and others. Local historians of a prosaic turn have hazarded the guess that the light rose from a kiln fire; but the favorite tradition cherished in the neighborhood is the one embodied by Sir WALTER in his "Lord of the Isles," that the light was of mystic origin, and still rises to commemorate BRUCE'S crossing on the anniversary of the incident. The height of the light-house will be about sixty feet, and the light is intended to be a revolving one.

The Eastern Budget states that negotiations have lately taken place between the Austro-Hungarian and the Montenegrin Governments for constructing a road through Montenegro. The Prince of the latter country has consented to a road being made from the Austrian frontier by the Austro-Hungarian Government, which will thus greatly facilitate the trade between Montenegro and Cattaro, and at the same time bring the turbulent and half-savage Montenegros more within the influence of European civilization. From the same source we learn that the Conference held at Vienna between the representatives of the Turkish, Austro-Hungarian and Servian Governments on the new railway to be constructed in Servia, connecting the Turkish lines with those of Austria, has now closed its labors, and its recommendations have been laid before the Porte for decision. The chief object aimed at by Turkey at this Conference was the construction of a railway in Bosnia, and by Austria a communication by railway with the harbor of Salonica.

A sensational crime has come to light in the northern district of Mount Hermon. About two years ago a report spread far and wide that several children had disappeared, and the Ruala Bedouin were so terrified that they used to stow away their progeny in boxes and baskets. The report was that a monster had been seen—a greyhound in shape, a lion in size. The realistic believed that a lion might perchance have strayed from the eastern desert, while the knowing ones suspected, as usual, some Druze plot. Latterly it has been discovered that a Druze woman from the village Dahr-el-Ahmur, between Rashyeiya and Rukhle, determined to revenge herself upon a rival in love, had poisoned and cut up no less than eight children. At last a head was found in a well at Rashyeiya, and the crime was brought home. The Druzes wished to put the murderess to death, but the authorities rescued her and sent her to Damascus. On June 27 she was marched through the bazaars in irons—a disgrace she endured with the greatest cynicism. The number of deaths has been exaggerated to fourteen, and the first victim was said to be her own son, who had accidentally witnessed something compromising.

The Police returns show that in the year 1870 as many as 124 persons were run over and killed in the streets of London, and 1,919 were maimed or injured. In the last five years, 1866-70, 533 persons have been thus killed, and 7,508 maimed or injured. The accidents in London streets in 1870 occurred this wise: 440 by being run over by cabs, 102 by omnibuses, 245 by broughams and carriages, 636 by light carts, 158 by heavy carts, 110 by wagons and drays, 257 by vans, ten by fire-engines, seventy-nine by horses ridden, and five by velocipedes. The Commissioner of Police reports, however, that special attention was paid during the year to the measures tending to diminish the risk of pedestrians. Constables had been placed at the most crowded crossings, and special pains taken to obtain the names and addresses of offenders. In the case of cabs the number-plate now affixed behind the cab generally suffices for this purpose; but in the case of light carts and wagons no such clue at present exists, and they often entirely escape.

Some interesting figures relating to remittances of English settlers from abroad are supplied by official returns. It appears that in 1870, as in former years, the amount sent home by previous emigrants to their friends in the United Kingdom was very large, amounting to £727,408 from North America and £12,804 from Australia and New-Zealand. Of the amount sent home from North America, no less than £332,638 was in the shape of prepaid passages to Liverpool, Glasgow, and Londonderry. Assuming that the remittances were made, as Emigration Commissioners believe, principally to Irish, it is clear that they were far more than sufficient to pay the passages of all the Irish who emigrated during the year. Assuming the price of passage at £5 5s. per statute adult, and the 74,283 Irish who emigrated in the year to be equal to 66,000 statute adults, the cost of their passages, the Commissioners state, would have been £345,500, or little more than the amount sent home as prepaid passages. The returns of the Emigration Commissioners show that in the twenty-three years from 1848 to 1870 inclusive there has been sent home from North America, through banks and commercial houses, upward of £16,334,000. Of what has been sent home through private channels there is no account.

Twelfth and Nineteenth Wards Citizens' Association.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 8, 1871.

To Hon. Wm. B. Dodge, President of the Chamber of Commerce, or, in his Absence, Hon. George Opdyke, Vice-President:

SIR: The public have been informed of the application by his Honor the Mayor and the Controller for the appointment by the Chamber of Commerce of a committee "to make a full and exhaustive examination of the public accounts and condition of the public debt of the City of New-York." Considering the very special circumstances under which this application is made, we most respectfully protest against the Chamber of Commerce making the appointment desired.

A faithful publication of the accounts, which the Mayor has so often promised, but which he has so long withheld, will enable every taxpayer interested in the matter to make a full and exhaustive examination for himself. It is not pretended but that for every debit in the Controller's books he holds a voucher of some description, so that the certificate of a committee, however eminent, to the fact, cannot be of the slightest benefit to either the Controller and the Mayor on the one hand, or the people on the other. That the book-keeping of the Controller is correct may for the present be assumed, as it is not questioned. What is questioned? What is particularly challenged is the accounts said to have been paid by the Controller, and the vouchers held by him for the payments made. These accounts, these vouchers, it is charged, afford prima facie evidence of fraud, of a connivance by both the Mayor and Controller to the misappropriation of several million dollars of the public funds. How can these questions—the real issue raised between the Mayor and the Controller, and the public, be satisfactorily dealt with by any committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce? Such a committee would possess no jurisdiction over the parties, and could not compel the attendance of any one of the alleged contractors, with their books, their workmen and others, to be examined as to the work stated to have been done and the furnishings said to have been supplied.

No doubt the Mayor and Controller also desire the opinion of the Committee as to the "condition of the public debt." What the amount of this debt is, the City and County accounts, when published, should show correctly, but as to the condition of the debt, clearly that is a question not falling within the province of any committee of the Chamber of Commerce to determine. A considerable portion of the debt it is charged, has been issued without legal authority, and for such issue the City and county are not responsible. Now, it is well known that the laws of the Chamber of Commerce exclude from its membership, gentlemen of the legal profession, and it is not likely that the public will be satisfied with the opinion of a non-professional committee on so important a legal question as that raised as to the bonds.

It is the opinion of the members of our Association, that unless the Mayor and Controller can, by means of the published accounts, show conclusively that they do not afford the prima facie evidence referred to, that the charges made can be only properly investigated by judicial proceedings, by means of which all moneys stolen from the City can be recovered, and the officials who may be proven unfaithful, punished as the law directs.

It shall be the duty of our Association to undertake and prosecute such proceedings, without any unnecessary delay.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN FOLEY, President.

THOS. S. CUNNINGHAM, Secretary.

More Police Changes—A New Precinct and Lodging-House.

At a meeting of the Board of Police, held yesterday afternoon, a resolution was adopted declaring the roadways of Lexington, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh and Eighth avenues, from Fourteenth-street to Fifty-ninth-street, to be a Precinct, to be known as the Thirty-third, which is to be provided with one Captain, two Sergeants, and not less than twenty-five patrolmen, all mounted. The object of the new force is to more effectually prevent rapid driving on these thoroughfares, which have lately become so dangerous. The Board also adopted a resolution asking the Trustees of the Sinking Fund for the use of the old Station-house of the Twentieth Precinct for the purpose of leasing it open as a lodging-house for vagrants who cannot be received in the Station-houses of the Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first and Twenty-second Precincts. Patrolman JOHN J. HASSETT, of the Twenty-first Precinct, was dismissed from the Department, and Patrolman THOMAS CROWLEY, of the Seventh Precinct, retired on a pension of $300 per annum.

A boulevard around Utica is proposed. It will make a drive a trifle over eight miles in length.

The late Mrs. MARGARET KALBFUS, of Baltimore, left all but $24,000 of her estate, valued at $180,000, to the Humane Impartial Society and the Aged Women's Home, of that city.

Texas papers report that five human skeletons were found hanging from the limb of a tree in Hunt County, recently. Horse thieves are treated with severity down there.

The Columbus (Ohio) State Journal asserts that CONNELL has, in his out-spoken opposition to the present Democratic platform in that State, a larger following than the new departure people can muster.

A curious and antique document of twelve foolscap pages, containing copies of the wills of FRANCIS, HENRY, and THOMAS LAYTON, executed in England in 1652, 1687, and 1671, was found in a dirt-barrel, in Boston, a few weeks ago, by employes of the Health Department.

The fair of the State Agricultural Society is to be held in Albany on the 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th of October. Entries, except for fruits and flowers, must be made on or before Saturday, the 2d day of September. The premiums are open to all comers, residents of New-York or non-residents, on equal terms.

A South Carolina Democratic paper says that four white men shot and instantly killed a hard-working, unoffending colored man, named JOHN PERRY, in the plantation of Trial-Justice W. L. W. RILEY, in Orangeburg, on Tuesday night. They compelled another negro to conduct them to PERRY'S house.

A Maryland paper improves upon the usual style of death notices by recording that an infant was "born into the order of fallen nature, Dec. 30, 1869; into the supernatural sphere of redeeming grace, April 27, 1870, and into the kingdom of life everlasting, July 8, 1871."

A letter from one of the Southern watering-places asserts that there are among the eight hundred guests a plenty of attentive young gentlemen, who are "beaux in the good old sense of the word." To divulge the spot might occasion too great a rush hence of belles, in the good old sense of the word.

In an article on the education of girls, the Hartford Courant incidentally says that it has an opinion which it is bound to defend, that study, and hard study, promotes digestion, that it is favorable to high physical health, and not unfriendly to rosy cheeks and roundness of form, and all the functions for which God has designed woman in her peculiar sphere.

The Macon (Ga.) Telegraph and Messenger adds its hearty dissent to Hon. BEN. H. HILL'S views upon the defunct institution of slavery. It says: "It is full early for any Southerner to scuttle the past and foul his own nest, by stigmatizing a system sanctioned by the Great Jehovah himself, and under which our fathers prospered so much and were universally recognized as the noblest type of the human race."

PRICE, the bow oar of the St. John crew, has been troubled for some days with a slight attack of diarrhœa, and ROBERT MCLAREN has taken his place to allow the crew to proceed with their practice. The Democrats of North Carolina concede the defeat of the Constitutional Convention by at least 8,000 majority. That they are very unhappy in it may be judged from the words of the Wilmington Journal, which says: "We make the acknowledgment with regret, and with dark forebodings for the welfare of the State. We submit to the decree of the majority as becomes law-abiding citizens, and shall labor faithfully and zealously to save the State from ruin."

A citizen of Parkersburg, West Va., is said to have received a letter from Chief-Justice CHASE, in reply to a series of resolutions submitted to him for consideration, in which he holds that the recent amendments are valid, and are parts of the Constitution, and are to be respected and obeyed as such, and this without qualification or reservation of any kind. The resolutions referred to are to be published at an early day.

The Lafayette (Ind.) Journal anticipates a very hot political contest in that State in the next campaign, as it will be one of the principal battle-fields of the Presidential struggle, but it also believes that the imbecility and knavery of the last Democratic Legislature—" than which there never was a more malignant and puerile body"—have so opened the eyes of the people that it will be hardly possible for the Democrats to win.

The Cincinnati Commercial denies the truth of the story touching a $300,000 breach of marriage contract, the parties being "Mr. NEWCOMB, a millionaire," and Mrs. SALLIE WARD HUNT, a widow, née SALLIE WARD, of Louisville, a lady whose beauty gave her fame. It says it is advised the whole story is without foundation; that NEWCOMB never courted the lady, and has not seen her for two or three years, and that the lady herself is disturbed and distressed by the story.

Baltimore is anticipating a great rush of visitors this Fall. In September it is to have a grand convocation of Knights Templar and of the General Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, for which suites of rooms in every hotel in the city have already been engaged. The General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church meets there on the first Wednesday in October. After that, it is to have the National Commercial Convention, which will send delegates from all parts of the West and South, and after that, comes the meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club, which is expected to draw a much larger number of strangers than it did last year.

The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin says that nearly every Grand Jury in that city, in its presentment, makes the same suggestions which were made by the jury which completed its labors on Saturday last; that they are all agreed that the present fee system, which holds out a positive inducement to the unworthy Magistrates who swarm in this city to commit innocent persons to prison, is utterly abominable, and worthy only to be abolished instantly; and that as they are all convinced that most of the crime and pauperism with which Philadelphia is cursed are attributable to rum, they coincide in the opinion that the License laws ought to be enforced more stringently, and the money procured from tavern licenses be given to the city, and not to the State.

From the Boston Transcript, we quote this paragraph: "A day or two since the brakeman of a passenger train on the Eastern Railroad, while sweeping out a car in Portland, found on the floor a pocket-book containing $125, with the owner's name on the book. The brakeman took considerable trouble to find the owner of the money, and finally traced him to Portsmouth, N. H., where he sent the money in charge of a friend. The loser, who is agent for a manufacturing company in the State of New-York, on receiving the pocket-book and contents, rewarded the finder by sending him one dollar, a sum he probably supposed was generous for a citizen of New-York, where honesty does not thrive and is not encouraged."

The proprietor of the grounds on which a menagerie and circus were exhibited in Cincinnati, last week, chartered the menagerie for one day, and gave an exhibition on Sunday. The Commercial tells the result: "He was ordered by the Police to stop the exhibition, but positively refused to do so. He was then arrested and taken to Oliver-street Station-house, on a charge of giving a public show on Sunday. He gave bail and was released, but continuing the show was arrested and rearrested several times. He was always prepared to give bail, however, and at 8 o'clock was still enjoying his freedom, and rejoicing in the computation that he had made nearly a thousand dollars clear by the enterprise."

Canadians are anticipating a very bountiful harvest this year. Summing up the account the Montreal Witness says: "From all sections of the country the same reports are given, that a yield so large and a quality so uniformly good, have not been realized in Canada for many years. We have heard old settlers affirm that they never saw better crops of Fall wheat and barley, to which Spring wheat is fully equal, and seems likely to be as well-gathered. With proverbial perverseness, many farmers are 'refusing to be comforted' by this glorious reward of their labors, fearing that the richness of the supply will so depreciate prices as to render the net value of the crops little beyond that of less fruitful years. That prices will not advance, but in all probability steadily decline, we are convinced; but that such decline will effect any serious diminution of the value of the harvest, is not likely."

THE DRUGGISTS.

Proceedings of the Examining Commission—How Their Work Goes On—Answer of the Commissioners to Graduates of the College of Pharmacy.

The Commissioners for examining druggists and drug clerks are still busily at work, and up to the present about 150 applicants for certificates have presented themselves. Not all of these, however, have passed. In fact quite a number have been requested to present themselves for a subsequent examination, or, in other words, have been notified that they will have to study their profession a little more closely before they can obtain certificates. As a specimen of the ignorance of a few who have presented themselves it may be stated that more than one was unable to tell the common tests for lead and copper. They were asked how they would determine whether the soda-water, of which so many thousand glasses are dispensed daily, was pure, and had taken up no noxious particles from the pipes through which it runs. This question they could not answer. Some did not even know the composition of soda-water, or how to make it, and are equally ignorant on other points. Yesterday eighteen applicants presented themselves, and the Commissioners were kept at work from 9 A. M. to 7 P. M. That there is a good deal of ill feeling against the Commissioners, is evidenced by the fact that, recently, several anonymous letters were shown them, addressed to German druggists, stating that if the recipients of the letters acknowledged the Commissioners in any way, the windows of their stores would be broken.

Yesterday the Commissioners forwarded the following letter, addressed to several graduates in Pharmacy, who are of the opinion that their diplomas exempted them from the action of the law:

OFFICE OF THE BOARD FOR THE EXAMINATION OF AND LICENSING DRUGGISTS AND PRESCRIPTION CLERKS IN THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, No. 72 UNION-PLACE, NEW-YORK, Aug. 8, 1871.

Messrs. John W. Doman, James C. Beach, Augustus W. Weidner and others, Graduates in Pharmacy:

GENTLEMEN: Having obtained legal advice on the points contained in the paper submitted by you to the Board for Examining and Licensing Druggists and Prescription Clerks in the City of New-York, we, the Commissioners of said Board, do respectfully reply to you as follows: The explicit reading of the act, viz., that all druggists, and persons engaged in dispensing medicines in the City of New-York, can no longer pursue their calling without a certificate from the Board for Examining and Licensing Druggists and Prescription Clerks, at once places the question of granting you an exception beyond the power of this Board. But while the law is thus explicit, the Commissioners of the Board, entertaining the highest respect for the diplomas of regular schools of pharmacy will allow to the possession of such diplomas the proper weight and consideration. The public, who feel a deep interest in the success of this Board, believing that it will guarantee immunity from the fatal errors of incompetent dispensers of drugs, would grieve to learn that the first opponents to the law were, not the ignorant and illiterate, but the highly-educated graduates of the schools of pharmacy. This disappointment would be still further increased by the consideration that the opportunity now afforded to obviate errors given to a profession which, owing to the want of some efficient legislative enactment, has hitherto lacked among us the respectability it enjoys elsewhere, would be sadly defeated. You are aware how stringent in other lands is the law regulating the sale of drugs, and how severe is the ordeal those must undergo who prepare themselves for the pharmaceutical profession. You know that in Germany and France many years of close application to scientific pursuits are the passkey to an apothecary's license, and that not only must the candidate for such license hold a diploma from a regular school of pharmacy, but that he must further satisfy the State of his fitness to perform the important duty of his calling, by submitting to an examination before a duly-appointed Board of Examiners. The consequence of so strict a course of action in foreign countries, are not only the preclusion of all but the bonafide sons of the soil to the practice of the drug, but the assignment to him of a position of high respectability in the community. On the other hand, it is notorious that, in the United States, owing to the laxity of the system which allows the unscientific and uneducated to swell the ranks of our apothecaries, not only has a blur long rested on the fair fame of the profession, but the community has suffered to an extent that can no longer endure. The use of nitro-glycerine and gunpowder has been confined within the strictest limits by legislative action, and there is no doubt that a correct public sentiment includes drugs and medicines in the same category. The grave carelessness or dispensers, as effectually destroys life as a pound of nitro-glycerine, and the public insist that as this dangerous explosive material cannot be stored within the City limits, or within certain distances, so they will not run the risk of being killed by persons of whose capacity to make up and dispense poisonous articles they have no competent attestation. It is the object of this law to remedy this evil, as far as possible, and with that end in view the Board accordingly created solicits the co-operation of all intelligent druggists, and especially the support of all regular schools of pharmacy, to which it is hoped you will add an adjunct. We hope, therefore, that the only opposition the law will henceforth encounter will be from those who are conscious that they cannot meet the requirements thereof, and are not consequently suitable persons to dispense drugs.

The fee, which is to be paid but once, was fixed at the published figures in the belief that while the utmost indulgence has been shown to the druggists and their clerks, the charge of a smaller sum would detract from the dignity and consequent value of the certificates to be granted by the board. In conclusion, permit us to express the hope that those who come within the reach of the action of this Board, remembering that restrictive laws, while causing inconvenience to individuals, are essentially intended for the public, for the welfare of the community, will, with this understanding, cheerfully submit to the requirements of chapter 310 of the laws of 1871 of the State of New-York. We have the honor to be, gentlemen, respectfully yours,

R. OGDEN DOREMUS, M. D., President.

THEOBALD FROHWEIN,

LAW REPORTS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS—AUG. 8.

Before Judge Sutherland.

HELMBOLD'S GAME OF BLUFF.

William Waltmire vs. H. T. Helmbold.—This is an action to recover $500 alleged to have been expended on behalf of defendant at his request. The defense set up is, that defendant was invited by plaintiff and other friends to join in a game of cards at the Continental Hotel, at Long Branch, the stakes being drinks for the party. The game defendant further claims was changed to what is known as "bluff," at which, though no money was on the table, he came out a loser to the extent of $500. This the plaintiff paid for him at his request; but defendant claims that inasmuch as the money was lost at gaming, no recovery of the amount can be had. The present motion was by plaintiff to strike out that portion of the answer relating to the game of bluff, as being irrelevant, he claiming that he had nothing to do with the losing of the money, but had simply paid it at defendant's request in order to save his honor.

Judge LUTHERLAND took the papers and reserved his decision.

"BREAKING INTO THE BAR."

An application was made on behalf of Clarence B. Campbell for an order of Court to compel Henry H. Morange, a lawyer, to give him a certificate of character and service as law clerk. The rules lately adopted by the Court of Appeals, governing the admission of members of the Bar, require that the applicant should have served a fixed term as law clerk, and file a certificate of such service and of good moral character from his employer, at the time of making his application. Campbell claims that Mr. Morange had refused to give the certificate, notwithstanding the full time had been served and he was of good moral character. The answer to the application was, that Campbell's service had expired more than five years ago, since which time Mr. Morange had lost sight of him, and was therefore unable to certify to his good character; that this motion, if granted at all, must be made at the General Term of the Supreme Court; that the applicant had never applied personally to Mr. Morange for the certificate, but had sent an attorney, who threatened to mulct him in costs if he did not furnish it; and, in short, that this was merely an attempt on the part of Mr. Campbell to "break into the Bar," or "climb into the sheep-fold some other way."

Judge Sutherland held the two first objections on the part of Mr. Morange to be well taken, and on those grounds denied the motion.

Counsel for Mr. Morange—Your Honor, I have been put to much inconvenience by the refusal of counsel on the other side to consent to an adjournment till to-morrow, and would therefore ask for costs.

Judge Sutherland—The present prospects of the junior members of the Bar are rather unfavorable to the collection of costs. I will deny that part of your motion.

AUTHORITY OF THE DOCK COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. Abraham R. Lawrence appeared on behalf of William J. and J. S. Peck, and moved for an order to show cause why an injunction should not issue against the Dock Commissioners to restrain them from removing certain buildings adjacent to the docks at the foot of Spring-street. The Messrs. Peck, it was contended, had a lease of the premises both from the private owners and the Corporation, five years of which had yet to run; under a permit in pursuance of the building act, they had erected valuable buildings thereon, which buildings the Commissioners were now about to tear down without compensation, or even notice to the owners. It was stated on behalf of the motion that the law appeared to give the Commissioners almost unlimited power, permitting them to take property by virtue of their own order, without notice and without compensation. As the order asked for contained a restraining clause pending the argument on a motion for a permanent injunction, Judge SUTHERLAND took the papers and reserved his decision.

FLOUR AND MEAL—The market for State and Western Flour has been very dull throughout, and prices have been depressed and irregular, with a very slow call noted for lines, particularly for export, the stringency in ocean freights checking the export movement. GRAIN—The offerings of prime Wheat have been quite limited since our last, and holders have been obtaining advance of 1@2c. a bushel, while circumstances, together with the stringent freight market, have been against free purchases, particularly for shipment, the demand for which purpose has been moderate, while the inquiry for milling has been restricted. The chief call has been for the better qualities of Spring and for Red and Amber Western. (Winter.) White Wheat has been comparatively dull. Sales have been reported since our last of 126,000 bushels, part from store and to arrive, including White Western, in lots, at $1 40@$1 52½, chiefly at $1 45@$1 50; Red and Amber Western at $1 30@$1 48, chiefly at $1 34@$1 39 for ordinary to good new, and $1 42@$1 48 for prime to very choice do., and $1 42@$1 46 for old; No. 1 Spring at $1 32@$1 32½; soft do. at $1 32@$1 34; No. 2 Chicago Spring at $1 27@$1 28½, chiefly at $1 28, with $1 29 reported bid for prime Milwaukee, afloat; and do., at $1 29@$1 30, chiefly at $1 25@$1 28; White Geneseo, $1 45@$1 60; Red and Amber State, $1 32@$1 45; new White Southern, $1 40@$1 55; new Amber do., $1 32@$1 44 ₱ bushel. Rye has been quiet, but quoted about steady at 75c.@80c. for new and Old Western, and 83c.@87c. for very good to choice White Southern. Barley has been dull and nominal. Barley Malt has been inactive at $1 20@$1 40 for bushel. Oats have been offered freely at lower and very irregular prices. The supply on the market today was unusually varied as to quality and condition. The dealings were almost exclusively in new. NEWS OF THE DAY

EUROPE.

A heated debate on the Ballot bill took place last night in the British House of Commons, at the close of which the measure was passed. Sir JOHN GREY, member for the City of Kilkenny, gave notice of his intention to call attention on Friday next to the subject of the Dublin riots on Sunday. In Dublin the rioters arrested were discharged yesterday on payment of small fines. Mr. SMITH, the M. P., who was beaten by the Police, has demanded an investigation. The foot and mouth disease of an extremely virulent type, has broken out among cattle in the County of Meath, Ireland.

The French Assembly has passed the bill providing indemnification to citizens for loss incurred during the war, either from the enemy or from the French troops, and 100,000,000 of francs are to be distributed at once among the most needy. The Income Tax bill is to be reported favorably. The examination of witnesses in the Communist trials began yesterday. M. FERRE, a prisoner, attempted to make a speech in defense of the Commune, but was not permitted. He denied ordering the burning of the palace of the Ministry of Finance. Several witnesses swore he forbade the release of prisoners in the Prefecture while it was burning. FERRE and ASSI were frequently reprimanded by the Court for insolence in speech and manner. In the second municipal elections in Strasbourg, Mulhouse and other conquered towns, on Monday, one-half the voters abstained from voting. The Gaulois and the Journal of Paris state that M. JULES SIMON is a member of the International Society. The revolt in Algeria continues in the Province of Constantine. A council of war was held yesterday, at Versailles, at which M. THIERS and Marshal MCMAHON were present, and vigorous measures to suppress the rebellion were decided on.

A London dispatch says a meeting was held on Sunday in Heidelburg to found a "Church German," at which delegates from Germany, Austria, and Switzerland were present. A committee was appointed to draft a constitution, to embrace the principles of the Council of Constance, in 1314—subordination of the Pope to the Council, separation of Church and State, lay participation in Church government, free election of Bishops, communal election of pastors, and modifications of the confessional—and to report to a meeting in Munich in September.

GENERAL.

Hon. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS has signified to the President his acceptance of the appointment as Arbitrator under the Treaty of Washington.

The contract to construct the Lake Tahoe tunnel through the Sierra Nevada of sufficient capacity to include a canal and railway tracks was closed recently between Col. VON SCHMIDT and the Central Pacific Railway Company. The work is to be finished in five years, and the Railway Company pay $1,000,000 as their share.

The state of siege was raised July 31 in Porto Rico, and quiet reigns throughout the island. The Captain-General has forwarded his resignation to Spain. Gen. SANZ, the former Captain-General, may be reappointed.

The President, at noon yesterday, acting under the Tenure-of-office act, formally suspended Gen. PLEASONTON as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and designated Deputy Commissioner J. W. DOUGLASS to perform the duties of the office. Gen. PLEASONTON, immediately on receipt of the notification of his suspension, turned the office over to Mr. DOUGLASS.

The Egyptian Chamber was closed yesterday by the Khédive, who complimented and congratulated the members on the results of the session.

Official information has been received that the Kuklux act of Congress is being enforced in the South, with more success than was anticipated, under the instructions emanating from Executive authority.

A tornado passed over Winnscome and Granville, Wis., on Monday night, and destroyed a boom containing 3,000,000 feet of timber, capsized a steamer, drowning the Captain and a raftsman; blew down thirty chimneys, broke innumerable windows, scattered grain in the shock, and destroyed a Roman Catholic Church in Granville.

Reports from all parts of Arkansas say the crop prospects were never better.

The Chamber of Commerce and the City Authorities.

Mr. OPDYKE'S letter to the Mayor and Controller reveals a true appreciation of the question at issue between the City authorities and the people. That question is one of the simplest kind, and cannot properly be described as either "Republican" or "Democratic" in its nature. It is rather one of common honesty, and it is capable of being decided by evidence which mus be equally weighty with men of all parties. Copies which we have published from the Controller's books prove that frauds have been carried on upon a vast scale, and that Mayor HALL and Controller CONNOLLY knew of these frauds, and made no attempt to defeat them. Ample time has been given for contradiction, and yet HALL and CONNOLLY have not been able to put their finger on a single item in the bills we have published, and say "we never paid that money." They have talked in a general way about our "garbling" the accounts, and we have replied by asserting, and offering to prove in any Court of law, that the accounts were copied word for word and figure for figure from the Controller's books. Neither the Mayor nor the Controller has dared to respond to this distinct challenge. The accounts we have laid before the public are neither more nor less than the Controller's own accounts, and this we can prove to the satisfaction of any judge or jury in the State. Mr. OPDYKE truly says that the accuracy of our figures has "stood unchallenged for weeks."

Indeed, the attempts made by HALL and CONNOLLY, or their advocates, to throw discredit on our revelations, have done more than anything else to establish their truth. The admissions, also, of the City authorities are absolutely fatal to them. They admit, as Mr. OPDYKE points out, that there has been an increase in the funded debt alone, since Jan. 1, 1869, "of at least thirty millions of dollars, or upward of one hundred per cent.;" and this "notwithstanding the annual receipt of about twenty-four millions of dollars from taxes." From the analysis given above, it will be seen that in the total City debt there has been an increase in thirty-one months of sixty-six and a half millions, or at the rate of $2,146,719 per month. Messrs. HALL and CONNOLLY endeavor to break the force of these facts by giving repeated promises that the Controller's accounts shall be published in full, and by publishing delusive abstracts of accounts, from which all particulars are carefully excluded. It is as if the directors of a company presented a bill of "grand totals," but omitted from their financial statement all details as to how the money had been spent—what had been paid for salaries and how much for working expenses. That is a system under which any amount of fraud could easily be carried on.

In order to gain a little more time, the Mayor and the Controller applied to the Chamber of Commerce to appoint a Committee of Investigation—anything rather than produce the actual accounts entered in the Controller's books. A similar committee misled the public once—more is the pity for the reputation of the men who composed it; and HALL and CONNOLLY, reduced to a desperate strait, clung with the despair of drowning men to this straw of a "Committee" again. But Mr. OPDYKE very plainly tells them that "a full, clear, and accurate statement of the receipts and disbursements of the City and County since January, 1869, including detailed vouchers and specifications for all payments that seem to be exorbitant, should be promptly submitted to the public." This is information which the public ought to have had long ago; it is theirs by right, not by favor, and to withhold it is a proof that dark work is going on. We have given even more direct proof—and the only reply that HALL and CONNOLLY have hitherto made has amounted to an insult to the intelligence of the community.

If HALL'S boast that all this will "blow over" turned out to be justified by events, it would be a reflection on the public almost as severe as that which the fraudulent accounts cast upon the City authorities. It would be regarded as a symptom of the low moral tone which, unhappily, at times besets the greatest communities. Astounding frauds have been disclosed; others are known to have been committed, although the proofs are not yet before the public; and yet the men who committed them are still permitted to retain posts of the highest trust and importance. Not only must public spirit be dead before such a state of things could be allowed to go on—public honor must be extinct also. But we have no fear of any such gloomy results. The citizens are inactive, because they do not see at present which way to move. The conjuncture is a difficult one, and men naturally approach it with caution. But in the end justice will be done. HALL and CONNOLLY, whose names are at the back of these fraudulent warrants, must resign or be expelled from office. Whether measures of a more severe kind cannot be put in force against them, remains to be seen. While they are where they are today, the City is disgraced in the sight of every other community.

The Gardener's Assistant.

We do not profess to know what are the present inducements which lead the World to defend the very men whom, not many months ago, were the objects of its fiercest denunciation; but it would be well for the Ring to double them, whatever they may be, in order to secure its silence. Should it go on in this dreadful way, the new representatives of that very guilty scape-goat, the wicked old Board of Supervisors, will find themselves wounded in the house of their friends, day after day, so grievously that death will follow far sooner than honest men could otherwise hope for. For a day or two past it has occupied the rôle of the Gardener's Assistant, and has rushed to the rescue of the men who have been improving our little open places at an expenditure rating from five thousand to one hundred thousand dollars an acre in a single year. The task which it has assumed is a hard one indeed, and wins for it all the sympathy due to those who do their work under the embarrassment of great difficulties. For there are the figures; and figures cannot lie, although those who use them may. The parks and patches contain so much ground, and on them such and such sums have been expended in the year 1870 for improvements only. The dimensions and the sums are given in the report of the Controller of the Department of Public Parks himself. Nothing can be done, therefore, but to attempt to make the public believe that all this money has been well expended, and that something like a dollar's worth has been received for every dollar.

Fortunately, we have a very good standard of comparison in the Central Park, which was brought from the condition of rugged waste, —a howling wilderness, bare, naked of everything but filthy abominations—to its present state of beauty, which makes it in its combination of grand proportions, rich adornment and high finish, a specimen of ornamental gardening unsurpassed, if equaled, in the world. All this was done by another body than the present gardeners to the Ring, and it was done at a total cost for the whole gigantic work, extending through thirteen years, of $7,344 per acre, counting all the 862,070 acres within the Park inclosure. This we set forth in our first article upon the subject, and to this the World replies that in estimating the cost per acre of the Central Park, there should be deducted from its whole area that of the reservoirs and certain other spots which reduce the part under the care of the Park Commissioners by 286,066 acres, or nearly one-third of the total surface, and that this deduction being made, "we shall find the amount expended on each acre to be $10,990 —a sum not less than, but greatly in excess of, the cost of improving any of the smaller City parks and places."

Now, as to the Central Park, we grant, for the sake of the present argument at least, these objections of the World, and accept its calculation. We have been expecting just this defense. We left purposely in our line of attack just this apparently weak spot, than which, we thought, nothing could seem more inviting to the Park Commission or its apologists; and we have not been disappointed. Assuming, then, their figures, (as we have done in all our exposure of this Ring rascality,) the total cost of the Central Park improvement from 1857 to 1871—grading, draining, buildings, bridges, arches, roads, paths, sunken roads, miles of stone masonry, and all—has been $10,990 an acre, and we are told that this is greatly in excess of the cost of improving any of the smaller City parks and places. Verily! On the very day when this monstrous assertion was made we showed, from the Park Controller's own report, that the cost of the improvements on the Beach-street Park in 1870 was at the rate of one hundred thousand dollars an acre!—just ten times the cost of all that has been done on the Central Park for the last thirteen years. Expenditure at this rate would make the Desert of Sahara blossom like the rose, and the Jersey Flats blaze with floral color like a Field of Cloth of Gold.

But, setting aside for the moment this wonderful and mysterious little patch of the City's surface, let us consider that one of "the City parks" which is most familiar to the eyes of all the people. The City Hall Park contains, according to the Controller's report, about eight and a quarter (8.234) acres. Now, of this surface there is the ground covered by the City Hall, the new Court-house, the old Court-house, the Halls of Record, and the buildings at the corner of Centre and Chambers streets. These occupy about three acres; but we will assume that they cover only two acres and a quarter, leaving six acres, on which the Park Commissioners expended, in the year 1870, $75,373. This is at the rate of $12,562 per acre, against the $10,990 which the Park Commissioners' apologist tells us is the total cost per acre of the Central Park from 1857 to 1871. Moreover, it is important to consider that a very large proportion, if not the greater and more expensive part, of the work which now shows on the City Hall Park and the Battery, and which the World describes with painful pen, was not done in 1870, but has been done during the past seven months, and is not charged in the recent report of the Controller. This fact is well known to the hundreds of thousands of our citizens who have daily passed or crossed those places during the last year and the present. We may confidently expect at least as great a charge in next year's report for the improvements of these places as for the improvements made in 1870. This will raise the rate of expenditure for the City Hall Park—a place which for generations has been leveled, and graded, and planted with trees, and the soil of which is as good as constant manuring could make it—to more than twenty-five thousand dollars an acre! This, to be sure, is only one-quarter of the rate of expenditure on the marvelous little Beach-street Park; but what will those who know it say to the Gardener's Assistant, which tells them that its own estimate of the whole cost of the Central Park, $10,099, is "greatly in excess of the cost of improving any of the smaller City parks and places?"

There is a great deal more to be said upon this subject, which we are quite ready to say if the Park Commission, instead of remaining quietly where we and the Gardener's Assistant have placed them, should think it advisable to minister further occasion to us. For upon this particular point, like PAUL JONES when he was summoned to surrender,

Mr. Ashbury and the Queen's Cup.

After all the concessions made to Mr. ASHBURY, it now seems that he will contend for the Queen's Cup this year with the same yacht as he did last year. The successive defeats of the Cambria by the Sappho in British waters tended to remove any doubts our yachtsmen may have entertained when they first heard of Mr. ASHBURY'S intention of contending for the Challenge Cup of the world, but her subsequent victory over the Dauntless in the ocean race showed that the English boat was, after all, no mean antagonist. In all the subsequent races of last season, including eight matches, the Cambria only succeeded in taking a prize from the Idler in a race in which the steering gear of that yacht became disarranged. These races took place under a variety of circumstances, and with breezes varying from the gentle zephyr to a double-reefed gale, but the result was always the same—the Cambria did well, but won no prizes. The issue of these races being deemed conclusive as to the general superiority of boats of American build, it was announced that the Cambria would be offered for sale, and that her owner would build another yacht on an improved model, so that the wresting of the Queen's Cup from us should this year be accomplished without fail.

To make matters more sure, while this new vessel, the Livonia, was being built, Mr. ASHBURY entered into a correspondence with the New-York Yacht Club, in which he set forth his right to sail against a single vessel instead of a fleet. The Club very magnanimously agreed to accept his reading of the letter of trust, and also waived the required six months' notice, whereupon Mr. ASHBURY announced that he was the representative of eight, and subsequently of four more English Clubs, for each of which he proposed to sail a race for the cup. This astonishing proposition, so utterly at variance with the generally received opinion as to the way the cup should be sailed for, was somewhat modified by the suggestion that the winner of the majority of these races should receive the cup instead of allowing its custody to depend on the issue of a single match. The New-York Club made no answer to these latter proposals, contenting themselves with preparations for defending the cup in October, when it was expected the Livonia would arrive here to sail for it.

Mr. ASHBURY'S epistolary preparations seem to have been more successful than his boat-building. The Livonia was duly launched, and a copy of her model has been forwarded to the Secretary of the Club holding the cup, according to the requirements of the letter of trust. Since then the performances of the Livonia have from time to time been announced in the cable telegrams, but they have proved neither astonishing nor satisfactory. On her trial trip the Guinevere, although not in racing trim, beat her, and she subsequently did little better in her regular races, although she did gain one prize. A recent dispatch now announces that she has failed to answer the expectations of her owner, who will not bring her to this country, but will again contend for the cup with the Cambria. This decision of Mr. ASHBURY is a virtual giving up of all just claims for the championship of the world. The sailing-master and crew of the Cambria, when she raced with the Sappho, did not hesitate to acknowledge the superiority of the latter vessel, and even the original America, after knocking about for twenty years, was more than able to hold her own against Mr. ASHBURY'S boat. Mr. FRANKLIN OSGOOD, who owned the Magic when she won the great race last August, has since then disposed of that boat, and built what he considers a better one, the Columbia. The performances of this new yacht have been highly satisfactory, and there is little question that she is as well suited to vanquish the Cambria as was her predecessor, the Magic. No competent judge who witnessed the performances of the Cambria last year will pretend to say she is superior, or even equal to the best yachts of last year's squadron, which was not as strong as the one which is now cruising in Eastern waters. It will therefore be ridiculous for Mr. ASHBURY, in his old yacht, to expect to gain this year, except by some technicality or accident, the cup he failed to secure last. We can readily understand why Mr. ASHBURY wanted, although badly defeated, to try his fortunes again in a new boat; but we fail to appreciate the feeling which, now that his new venture has proved a failure, still urges him to contend for the championship with a vessel which has been proved to be inferior in speed to many boats now afloat in our waters.

Another Model Switchman.

Close upon the attempt of two boys to throw an Erie train from the track, near Port Jervis, comes an accident from a similar cause at Shohola, on the same road, which still more narrowly escaped the most disastrous consequences. Here, too, a train thrown from the track would have plunged over a precipice and into a ravine a hundred feet deep. Nor in this case was there any lucky delay, or any interposed freight-train, to avert the impending danger to human life. Passenger-train No. 12, at 2 o'clock on Monday morning, reached Shohola, running at the rate of thirty miles an hour. When within a few hundred feet of the station, the switch was wrongly changed by the switch-tender, and though the engineer saw the danger in time to reverse his engine, nine of the ten cars in the train ran off the track. They fortunately, however, remained on the road-bed, checked within a foot or two of the yawning chasm, and so by the merest hair's breadth, for the second time in two days, the country has escaped being horrified by a catastrophe whose magnitude might have eclipsed all previous disasters.

Is there here, too, no one to blame? It has been hinted that the switchman who came so near sending a hundred or so of his fellow-creatures headlong into eternity was a dismissed servant of the Company, who committed the act out of revenge. But this we are reluctant to believe. It would have been a piece of savagery which we would rather deem impossible. But on the less shocking supposition, that the switchman who confused with sleep, and so committed the error innocently, was he the right man for the place? And have his employers no responsibility? This matter should be at once investigated. Such acciden's will continue to occur until a Government Board is appointed to examine and constantly supervise all servants of railways or steamboats, to whose vigilance and sobriety is in any way committed the grave charge of human life.

A Meeting of "Influential Citizens."

We copied, yesterday, from an evening satellite of the New-York Herald, an account of a meeting of "influential citizens" in the Twenty-first Ward, at which resolutions were passed declaring CONNOLLY'S accounts to be "all right," and forming a "Richard B. Connolly Association" to propagate Slippery DICK'S system of book-keeping. We have since obtained some perfectly trustworthy particulars concerning this meeting, and we publish them, because they tend to throw light on the general character of these "movements" in favor of the Ring which are daily reported in the corporation papers. In the first place, this precious collection of influential citizens met at a gin-mill at the corner of Thirty-sixth-street and Second-avenue, in a little back room, not large enough to hold much more than a dozen persons. The "President" of the new Association is THOMAS B. FROST, a man who keeps a low distillery-shop in the Twenty-first Ward; C. W. MCAULIFFE, "Vice-President," keeps the gin-shop at which the meeting was held; MICHAEL CLUNE, "Secretary," is a Court officer, one of DICK CONNOLLY'S appointments; JEREMIAH MURPHY, "Treasurer," is another gin-shop keeper, and not only holds a place himself under DICK CONNOLLY, but has his family cared for by the City as well. These men, with a few lookers on, made up the meeting of which HALL and CONNOLLY'S papers have been so proud.

Such are the "influential citizens" who now support CONNOLLY and HALL. On the other hand, we cannot deny that citizens of undoubted respectability are willing to see their names blazoned in the newspapers in association with the rogues who are proved to have defrauded the people on a vast scale. While Mr. WILLIAM BUTLER DUNCAN—himself the soul of honor,—Mr. BLODGETT and Mr. A. T. STEWART, are willing to advertise themselves as co-directors of an important undertaking with CONNOLLY, HALL and SWEENY, can we be much surprised that the poor devils who haunt gin-mills should come forward to form Richard B. Connolly Associations? What Mr. W. BUTLER DUNCAN is not ashamed to do cannot be beneath THOMAS FROST, the rum-seller.

Bench and Bar.

A note of warning is sounded by the Albany Law Journal to the lawyers of the State outside of the City of New-York, against allowing the nomination of Judges to pass from their hands, in which, by the custom of a quarter of a century, it now rests. The Bar of this City, the Journal points out, has already been driven from the exercise of this privilege by professional politicians.

"The results," it declares, "have been most grievous and appalling. The gravest judicial scandals have arisen; and accusations of judicial bribery and corruption are freely made and defiantly and irrepressibly published. Whether these accusations are true or false is nothing to our purpose. That they have become possible and exist at all is of itself a sufficient demonstration of the destructive tendency of allowing judicial nominations to fall into the hands of corrupt, venal and irresponsible professional politicians. Already the Bench in New-York, and, as a sort of corrollary, the Bar also, has lost more of the popular respect and confidence than it can regain in a generation."

We are glad that the Law Journal has advanced to the point of using the Tammany Judiciary as a warning example. It is not long since it conducted a discussion of the duty of the Bar on the assumption of the incorruptibility of New-York Judges. Every candid critic—such as the Law Journal unquestionably is—brought to see the existence of an evil, is a positive help toward its removal.

The Latest Murder.

It is a favorite argument of the defenders of pugilism that the cultivation of the "manly art" discourages the use of the knife and pistol. The practiced boxer, they tell us, will desire as little as he will need, to resort to any other than the weapons which nature gave him. In the glowing picture of these enthusiasts, the ideal pugilist is full of bluff, generous courage which would scorn to take advantage of a weaker adversary. If this was ever true anywhere, it has certainly ceased to be true now and in the City of New-York. The ruffian who styles himself the Champion of America, and who has earned that proud title by running away from every antagonist who could oppose him on anything like equal terms, has served a number of years in the State Prison for stabbing a policeman. And now this worthy creature's brother has so profited by his shining example that he too may boast of committing as cowardly and unprovoked a murder as was ever recorded in New-York.

For these outlaws, that class of the community whom they know and revile as "Dutchmen" have always furnished a chosen quarry. The "Dutchman" they know to be almost always peaceable, inoffensive, and law-abiding—a person who will at all times rather avoid a quarrel than seek one. Moreover, he has seldom much influence with the authorities, and may therefore be assaulted and beaten by a sufficient number of these warlike heroes with entire impunity. Such a victim Mr. MICHAEL COBURN, brother of the "Champion," and Mr. JOHN SAUNDERS, his "pal," debarred by the action of the Police from their pet diversion of mangling each other's faces, selected as a vent for their ferocity. Not being satisfied with the odds of two to one, they took the further precaution to attack their adversary while asleep. Thus, helpless and unsuspecting, on his own door-step, CHARLES BRUNNER, an unoffending grocer of Forty-seventh-street, was set upon by these men, and so terribly kicked, beaten, and stabbed that his death is hourly looked for. The only provocation that can be assigned for the crime is that the murdered man had previously asked COBURN for his brother-in-law's watch.

These wretches ought to be put upon their trial without unnecessary delay. Let no false clemency, as in FOSTER'S case, rob justice of half of its influence by checking the swiftness which makes it most terrible to the evil-doer. It is time to give a severe and unmistakable lesson to the shoulder-hitters and felons from every shore who have made this City their home. Banished from every other decent community, their disgusting trade interdicted even in the land of its nativity, these "bruisers" flock here as to a secure asylum. They have no means, even if they had the disposition, to earn an honest livelihood. The masters of these scoundrels are in too much trouble themselves to help their tools, and we may surely hope that justice in this instance will be done. If BRUNNER dies, we invoke for COBURN and SAUNDERS a short shrift and a long rope, and in any other event the longest possible term of imprisonment.

MINOR TOPICS.

In 1870 the Republicans of Kentucky, on a vote nearly as large as that cast in the Presidential election, cut down the Democratic majority more than one-half. This was in a Congressional election. This year, with an election for State officers and a Legislature (which is to choose a United States Senator in place of GARRET DAVIS,) the Republicans have done still better. The canvass was a very lively one, the two candidates, LESLIE, Democrat, and HARLAN, Republican, traveling over the State, and presenting their respective views to the same audiences. LESLIE adhered to the Bourbon doctrine, and repudiated the new departure. HARLAN exposed the dangers to which the ancient policy exposed the State—of running counter to the progressive tendencies of neighboring States, of repelling intelligent immigration, and of keeping up an ignorant and dangerous class in the community. A good many prominent Democrats were averse to LESLIE'S obstinate conservatism. We must, however, await more definite figures to ascertain how far the Democratic loss exceeds the gain to the Republicans from the negroes who voted for the first time this year. This will test the practical strength of the new departure indirectly.

Mr. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS has accepted the appointment of Arbitrator from the United States under the Treaty of Washington. No man more fit for the delicate and difficult task could have been selected. He is perfectly familiar with the facts connected with the sailing of the Confederate cruisers, and the positions of the two Governments at the time and subsequently regarding them. It was, of course, a great gain when the consent of Great Britain was obtained to the application of American principles to the Alabama claims. But that gain might easily have been neutralized had a man been chosen less able than Mr. ADAMS, to see that the whole case shall be presented for consideration. We have Great Britain's acknowledgment that "due diligence" should have been used to prevent certain offenses now first treated as such by that Government. The value of that concession depends very largely on how the Board of Arbitrators may define "due diligence." In this light Mr. ADAMS' appointment and acceptance are an advantage not to the United State alone but to the general interests of international law.

In spite of the half-hearted adhesion of a good many Liberals and the bitter opposition of the united ranks of the Conservatives, the Ballot Bill has passed the English House of Commons. The Peers can hardly afford to attract a fresh amount of popular odium by refusing to pass a measure which is greatly favored by the mass of the people. We shall, therefore, have an early opportunity of watching the growth, under different institutions from our own, of such familiar excrescences of the ballot-box as repeating and false returns. The ingenuity of British members of Parliament has been fully exercised during the past few weeks in contriving checks upon these, and we may possibly learn something from the efficacy or failure of the newly-devised remedies.

As reported elsewhere, the treatment of one of Mr. BERGH'S officers in Brooklyn, calls for a searching investigation. The alleged circumstances are highly discreditable, first, to the passengers who encouraged the car-driver to resist the humane intervention of the officer, and second, to the policeman who is said to have refused to interfere to prevent obvious cruelty. The Fifth Ward roughs, who mistook the officer, SAGE, for a revenue detective, acted after their kind in maltreating him, but from the passengers who refused to sacrifice a few minutes to relieve an overburdened horse, better things might have been expected. To the policeman who was so ignorant or careless of his duty as to fail to arrest the car-driver, appropriate punishment ought to be meted out.

The experience of the past year's working of the telegraph system of Great Britain, under the control of the Post-office Department, has been highly satisfactory. The Government paid for the telegraph lines of the United Kingdom the sum of $37,500,000, which they borrowed at three and one-quarter per cent., and on which the annual interest is therefore $1,218,750. The gross earnings for the year, at a uniform internal rate of twelve cents for a message of twenty words, have been $3,992,900, or nearly ten per cent. on the purchase price. Deducting from this the working expenses, $2,350,000, (rather less than five and one-half per cent.,) and the annual interest above quoted, there remains for the past year a net profit to the State of $189,450. With a business said to be rapidly increasing and without any corresponding increase of the working expenses, the telegraphs bid fair to become a permanent and appreciable source of income to the British Treasury.

We are informed that the Controller declines to pay that little bill of MCKENNA, the carpenter, which passed the Board of Supervisors in June last. The bill amounts to $26,000, and purports to be for carpenter-work done in the Marine Court. We have stated that the work could be done for $600, but CONNOLLY is said to have told the claimant, when he called for his pay, that it was not worth $500. It appears, then, that the Controller can, if he likes, refuse to pay swindling bills, notwithstanding they have passed the Board of Supervisors. Why did he not refuse payment of similar bills from INGERSOLL, GARVEY, and KEYSER? Had it not been for our repeated exposures of this fraudulent bill of MCKENNA before it reached the Controller's office, it, too, would doubtless have been paid, and no questions asked. But how is Mayor HALL to escape his responsibility? This is no affair of the "old Board of Supervisors," but of the new Board, over which the Mayor presides, and in which he has an absolute veto power. How came he to permit such a swindle as this of MCKENNA'S to pass the Board? and how came he to sign it after it had passed?

The "eternal fitness of things" is well illustrated, in a double sense, by one of the pictorials of last week, which, in the very midst of a glowing description of "Boss" TWEED'S American Club-house, interpolates a wood-cut representation of "Gotham-court," that nest of nastiness in Cherry-street, which our Board of Health cleared of its occupants a few days ago. The coincidence was accidental, of course, for the spot chosen for the cut was probably the only one available; but, for all that, it does seem odd that cause and effect should be put into such close relationship. Thus we are shown the gorgeous club-life of our municipal rulers on the one hand, and its result, tenement misery, on the other. Lavish luxury at Greenwich, made easy by unscrupulous public robbery in New-York, has driven the honest poor from healthful happy homes into such vile quarters as Gotham-court, until the authorities themselves are forced to remove them, lest their squalor should breed a pestilence. Is it really worth the while of the poor to keep on supporting the Democratic faction which thus drives them into beggary?

A newspaper printed in Crawford County, Kansas, had the courage recently to expose the misdeeds of a gang of ruffians, and in a few days afterward it was left without a place of publication. The office was set on fire and burned to the ground, in order, as was hinted, that the mouth of the editor might be effectually closed. The Governor of the State, who seems to have a proper appreciation of the outrage, has issued a proclamation offering a reward of $500 each for the arrest and conviction of every person concerned in it. Hitherto the measures adopted in other States for the suppression of this growing spirit of lawlessness, have been totally inadequate. In the present instance, however, the prompt action of the Governor of Kansas promises better success. He concludes his proclamation with the assurance that freedom of speech and of the press will be maintained if need be, by the whole power of the State.

The City authorities are incurring a grave responsibility in what may seem to them a small matter, in allowing the continuance of the nuisance we alluded to yesterday, as existing on the west side of the City, in the neighborhood of Barclay-street. The throwing of decaying fruit into the public street, to be decomposed by such heat as we have had for two days, is a very sure means of breeding disease, and is something which any government pretending to take the slightest care of the health of the community entrusted to its charge would put a stop to at once. And, on the other hand, there can be no reason why the crowd of teams which keep pedestrians in the presence of this filth, should not be kept moving, and the passage way made available at all times by the attention of a few policemen.

NO MORE WHITEWASHING.

Reply to the Mayor's Appeal to the Chamber of Commerce.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
NEW-YORK, AUG. 8, 1871.

To Hon. A. Oakey Hall, Mayor, and Hon. Richard B. Connolly, Controller:

GENTLEMEN: On my return to the City yesterday, the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce handed to me, in the absence of Mr. DODGE, your letter of the 4th inst., addressed to the presiding officer of that body, requesting him to convene a special meeting of the Chamber, for the purpose of appointing a large and influential Committee of its members to make a thorough examination of the financial accounts of the City and County of New-York, and to report the result to the people.

Under the by-laws of the Chamber, the President has no power to call special meetings except upon the written application of at least ten of the members.

So far as I have been able to ascertain the views of members, they do not deem it expedient at the present time to convene a meeting of the Chamber for the purpose indicated in your letter. So many of the members are absent from the City that the action of the proposed meeting would afford no reliable indication of the views of the Chamber; and it is believed that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to find, during this season of relaxation from business, a sufficient number of properly-qualified members willing to assume the arduous duties that must devolve upon the large Committee of Investigation you propose. It is also believed that there are other and stronger reasons for a postponement, for the present, of the proposed meeting of the Chamber.

The records of the Controller's office, so far as they have been officially submitted to the public, show an alarming increase in the public debt, an increase in the funded debt alone, since Jan. 1, 1869, of at least thirty millions of dollars, or upward of 100 per-centum, notwithstanding the annual receipt of about twenty-four millions of dollars from taxes, exclusive of the revenue from City property.

Other alleged records of that office which have appeared in the NEW-YORK TIMES, and the accuracy of which have stood unchallenged for weeks, prove the extraordinary character of some of the charges for repairs and supplies that have been audited and paid.

The Albany Argus, in noticing these transactions, while admitting their improper character, authoritatively declares that a part of the funds thus taken from the City Treasury was used in corrupting the Legislature of the State!

In view of these astounding facts, it is thought to be due alike to the City authorities and to the citizens, that a full, clear and accurate statement of the receipts and disbursements of the City and County since January, 1869, including detailed vouchers and specifications for all payments that seem to be exorbitant, should be promptly submitted to the public.

I am persuaded that nothing short of this will meet the just expectations of the people.

Such a statement can be prepared more accurately and more promptly by the employes in the Finance Department, who are familiar with its books and accounts, than by any outside Committee, however intelligent. When such statement shall have been published, a Committee of the Chamber of Commerce might, perhaps, be usefully appointed to examine the books and determine as to its accuracy.

Entertaining these views, I have not felt it to be my duty to attempt to secure a special meeting of the Chamber at this time.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully your obedient servant,

GEORGE OPDYKE,
First Vice-President Chamber of Commerce

The Warmoth-Dunn Difficulty—Origin of the Trouble—The State Convention—President Grant's Popularity—A Murder in a Court-Room—Business Prospects in New-Orleans—Miscellaneous.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW-ORLEANS, Friday, Aug. 4, 1871.

As the time approaches for the holding of the Republican State Convention in this city, the fight between the Warmoth and the Dunn-Carter factions is getting hotter. That your readers may understand this matter, it will be necessary to go back to the meeting of the Legislature of this State in 1868, shortly after the accession of Gov. WARMOTH to the Gubernatorial chair, which he still occupies. During the session of that Legislature Gov. WARMOTH endeavored to coerce Lieut.-Gov. DUNN into certain measures of a doubtful character, connected with notorious financial schemes intended for personal aggrandisement, which coercion did not succeed. From that time to the present the breach between these two high State officials has been widening, until now it is believed there is no possibility of bridging it over.

Through the power possessed by the Governor, he was enabled to obtain the passage of laws by the Legislatures that have been held since 1868, which gave him supreme dictatorial authority over all the official positions of the State Government, even including the Supreme Court, placing the appointment of these officers in his hands. Since the break between the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, the former has been careful in the selection of officers who would not hesitate to sustain his policy. The persistent efforts of the Governor to coerce his Lieutenant served only to intensify the sentiments of the latter, which are shared in by the great mass of the colored population. Against the Governor and his policy is also arrayed the United States officials, such as Collector CASEY, Postmaster LOWELL and Marshal PACKARD, and the present struggle is, which party shall secure the majority of the delegates for the State Convention to be held here on the 9th inst. This Convention is to select the members of the State Central Committee, who will have charge of the affairs of the Republican Party here until after the election in 1872. Gov. WARMOTH naturally aspires for a renomination next year, and is exerting all the power at his command to carry the Convention. If he should be beaten he is lost, for his enemies assert that an impeachment at the next session of the Legislature will surely follow. On the assembling of the delegates to the State Convention, a scene may be witnessed which it is not at all pleasant or agreeable to contemplate. On the one hand WARMOTH will use the Police of this city, who are entirely under his control, to effect an organization of the Convention in his interest, while upon the other the Dunn-Carter party have called upon United States Marshal PACKARD to use the strong constabulary and military force which is at his command in resisting such a dictatorial movement. Whatever be the issue of this political imbroglio, it is sincerely to be desired that when it is over the Republicans may become united for the contest of next year. There is no doubt whatever that President GRANT is the choice of the Republicans of this State for a renomination in 1872, with the exception of Gov. WARMOTH and a few of his friends, who are said to be opposed to such renomination.

Another of the shooting cases of the season occurred in this city yesterday. A notorious scoundrel named ARTHUR GUERIN was shot by Deputy Sheriff JAMES HUESTON, under the following circumstances. During the progress of a trial before Judge ABELL, in the Criminal Court of this City, in the case of ANATOLE DECOUX, GUERIN came into the Court-room, with his head covered. Judge ABELL ordered a Deputy Sheriff to attend to this breach of decorum, who proceeded to enforce the order of the Court by leading GUERIN to the door. As he reached the door HUESTON followed his fellow-officer, and an angry altercation ensued, when, on GUERIN making a motion as if to draw a weapon, HUESTON drew his pistol and fired three shots at GUERIN, and mortally wounded him. It appears that there had been a previous quarrel between these men. The universally expressed opinion in the community is that we are rid of one of the most desperate murderers that this city has ever had in its midst, and who has been a terror to the people here for many years. HUESTON will not be prosecuted, as it is the generally expressed opinion that it was a case of justifiable homicide.

The course pursued by the TIMES in regard to the frauds of the Tammany Ring has been approved by many of the papers of this city. They are earnest in their indorsement of its fearless attack upon HALL and CONNOLLY, who have permitted, if not participated, in the robbery of the tax-payers of New-York, and they hope it will not cease its thunderings until those men shall have been punished as they deserve.

The business of this city has been very dull, and must so continue until about the 1st of October, when the new cotton crop will make its appearance. The stores on some of our principal business streets are without custom sufficient to pay their expenses, which must result in their being closed and their proprietors pushed into the Bankrupt Court, unless some improvement takes place soon.

The city is very healthy, and there will be no epidemic during the present Summer. The weather has been and continues to be very pleasant and delightful. The overflow of June did not produce any unpleasant results, beyond the inconvenience to the people where it occurred, during its continuance, which was not more than two weeks.

Some of the newspapers here are in rather a precarious position. The Commercial Bulletin is said to be expiring and will not last much longer. Two or three mushroom sheets have made their appearance, but as there is not much capital invested in them they will soon disappear. The Mitrailleuse is one of that class. The Republican Picayune and Times are the only papers published here that have positions of strength and permanence.

The one great drawback to the progress of this city is the want of energy on the part of the old citizens of the place. They do not feel inclined to do anything to invite and encourage immigration or internal improvements. They oppose everything that will bring enterprise and capital to the city, and the consequence is that real estate is depressed and tenants are scarce. Houses and stores without limit are empty, and the trade of the city is gradually diminishing. Although no epidemic is affecting its condition at the present time, the foolish policy of the property-holders has been injuring our prospects fully as much as the yellow-fever ever did. When will it end? Certainly not until new blood is infused into our population by buying or driving out these stumbling-blocks who stand in the way of our progress. S.

The Falling of California Lakes.

From the Yreka (Cal.) Union, July 29.

Prof. GODFREY informs us that the lakes in the eastern part of the county are lower now than they have been known before for several years. It is well known that emigrants who came into California in 1849 and up to 1852 by the Lassen trail, did not recognize the lakes in Surprise Valley as being anything more than mere alkali mud flats; and, in fact, they gave to them the not very dignified appellation of the "Mud Lakes." Since then, however, they have filled up with water, and for many years have been quite imposing, both for their dimensions and depth. The Professor informs us that at present their dimensions are greatly contracted, and that they have become so shallow that it is perfectly practicable to cross them on horseback. It is well known, also, that Goose Lake, from 1849 to 1852, had no visible outlet, in fact we have often been told that the trail passing round the southern border of the lake, by which the emigrants to this country and Jackson County, Oregon, traveled in 1852, was several miles to the northward of what has been the southern boundary of the lake for several years past. It is also true that for many years past, a large stream has flowed out of it, which has been the largest branch of Pitt River. The Professor says the waters of the lake have again receded and that it has ceased to overflow—that the "slough" so called—the stream that for many years has run out of it—is now dry. We presume these rather remarkable phenomena must be due to the unprecedentedly small amount of snow and rain which has fallen during the last three or four seasons. The springs in the mountains—the unfailing sources of supply in ordinary seasons—have dried up.

A Few Words of Common Sense.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Until the publication of the late statement of the financial affairs of the City at the close of business July 31, 1871, many friends of Mayor HALL were so charitably disposed toward him as to believe him to have been innocent of any personal participation in these frauds. But it seems impossible to look upon his late action in any light consistent with his innocence.

The Mayor and Controller of this City have been publicly charged with misappropriating millions of dollars officially intrusted to their care—and with endeavoring to cover these peculations by false entries in the books of payments, which it is alleged have never in fact been made—many checks having been drawn in favor of, and paid to, fictitious persons, and with getting up and approving fraudulent vouchers to cover such pretended payments.

These are plain and palpable charges, and have been made in no doubtful or questionable language, and whatever else may be said of these accused persons, they are not fools, and they understand fully the nature and extent of the charges made against them.

It is not denied that all this money was drawn from the Treasury upon warrants signed by the Mayor, as well as the Controller, and it therefore becomes A. OAKEY HALL, not only as the Chief Magistrate of this City, but as an honest man, to answer these charges in some different strain from anything which has yet appeared, if he wishes to exonerate himself from the suspicion of having shared the proceeds of this infamous plunder.

But as a voucher, at least, against the continuance of these swindles, he promised the citizens of New-York that he would require the Controller to print periodical statements of the financial operations of the City and county, and the first of these appeared in your columns yesterday. But is it not an insult to the common sense of this mercantile community to call that document a statement of the financial situation of the City? Where is the account of the cash in the Treasury, or which should be there, at least on paper?

The authorities have never been charged with or suspected of stealing bonds, or with issuing any bonds not authorized by law. These bonds have all been legally issued and sold, and the City has doubtless received the money for them, but what has become of the money? That is the question which is now agitating the public mind. Some millions of it have been accounted for by the fraudulent vouchers already exposed in your columns, but it appears from the late statement, that within the last two months, at least seven millions of dollars more have been received from the sale of bonds issued for the purpose of paying other portions of the City debt; but as these other debts have not been paid, this large amount should be in the Treasury, unless it has been drawn out by warrants signed by the Mayor and Controller. It is believed that this money, also, has been stolen or embezzled by the Ring. The Mayor is the only one who has the right to call upon the Controller to account for this cash received, and see how carefully he calls upon him for everything else but that.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, July 22, 1871.

TO THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT: In accordance with concluding paragraph of section 31 of the charter, please furnish me at your earliest convenience a statement up to 31st instant (but certainly before Aug. 2) of the City and county debt; and also a statement of all payments upon appropriation and special accounts of both City and county during July—and also of the capital of the sinking fund as it exists July 31.

Please furnish a similar report to me hereafter at the end of each month.

A. OAKEY HALL, Mayor.

And how carefully the Controller furnishes the precise information called for, and does not say a word as to the cash received, or what has become of it!

Are the bankers and capitalists of the City of New-York to understand that the market is to be flooded with this consolidated stock, and the money to be left under the control of the Mayor and Controller, without any account or other assurance that it will be applied to the redemption of the present outstanding debt, except the personal assurances of persons who have forfeited all pretence even to common honesty? If it is generally understood that the individual popularly known as Slippery Dick is to issue this stock at his discretion, receive the proceeds of it, and divide it at his pleasure among the Ring, the bonds and stock of the City will soon be as worthless as even the personal obligations of this slippery individual before he struck this rich placer. SENEX.

The Political Field in New-Jersey.

Conceding that the Republicans of New-Jersey must nominate for Governor a man who has the experience and ability to master and properly conduct the business as well as the political duties of the office, the Newark Courier says:

"Outside the wrangle over candidates the political outlook in this State is most encouraging. The Democrats are thoroughly disheartened, and, judging from present appearance, will not be able to make anything approaching a square fight. Recent events and exposures have taken the vim out of their leaders and placed them mainly on the defensive. The dissensions caused by the 'new departure' doctrine, the outrages against civil rights and religious liberty perpetrated in New-York, and the glaring frauds and corruptions of the Tammany leaders, have completely crushed out whatever hopes may have been entertained for the success of the Democracy of New-Jersey. They feel that defeat is certain, and have no stomach for the contest. Weak-kneed or dissatisfied Republicans, who were expected either to stay away from the polls or cast their votes with the Democracy, no longer hesitate. They have been too thoroughly Americanized to lend their countenance to mob violence and religious intolerance, and cannot sanction the enormous frauds and thefts of the Democratic leaders. They have read aright the lessons of the last few months, and will, we doubt not, work and vote for the maintenance and perpetuation of Republican principles. Not only so, but many who have heretofore uniformly voted with the Democracy will be compelled either to withhold their ballots or cast them in favor of that party which upholds civil liberty, maintains the laws and exposes political corruption. But this view should not induce any Republican to fold his hands and relinquish his efforts in behalf of his party. Rather let these favorable considerations influence him to renewed exertions, that the party in November next may realize all the benefits of victory. Let the defeat of the Tammany Democracy be so overwhelming in our State as to indicate unequivocally how it and the Union will go in 1872."

Death of Cincinnati Journalists.

Mr. THEODORE SMIDT, one of the editors of the Cincinnati Volksfreund, died of dropsy, on Sunday. The Commercial says: "Mr. SMIDT'S career was not on ordinary one. Born in Leipsic, his father among the most eminent medical men of that city, he received a first rate education, and when twenty years of age emigrated to America. No sooner arrived, than he enlisted in the regular army, and was soon after promoted. At the breaking out of the civil war he held the rank of Lieutenant. He was in the Army of the Potomac through all its campaigns, from that of the Peninsula to the surrender of LEE at Appomattox Court-house. At the conclusion of hostilities, he left the service and came to Cincinnati. He was presently engaged on the local staff of the Volksfreund, a position he held up to the time of his death. He was a man of capacity, and is said to have filled his place ably. His funeral will take place today at 1 P. M., from the residence—the day on which, had he lived, he would have been thirty-two years of age."

G. GUILLAUME VON CHATAUBRIAND, editor of a German scientific journal of the same city, also died on Sunday in the Cincinnati Hospital, after a brief illness.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Tammany Republican Committee.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Mr. GREELEY, in the Tribune of Monday morning, seeks to escape by a "new departure." He alleges that he consented to accept the Chairmanship of the Committee over which he presides, with the single purpose of healing the unhappy feuds which now distract and divide the councils of the Republican Party of this City, and that he had strong hopes of effecting this object until "the abrupt removal from office of Hon. MOSES H. GRINNELL and Gen. GEO. W. PALMER baffled" his purpose. In other words, Mr. GREELEY places the responsibility for the continued distractions in the Republican Party upon the authorities who removed from office the gentlemen above-named.

Just how the removal of any man can fairly be made to excuse or palliate feuds which may imperil the success of a great party, Mr. GREELEY fails to explain. But, at any rate, he raises at once the question of the fitness of the gentlemen he names to hold office, and challenges an exposition of the reasons for their removal. Are these gentlemen themselves prepared to meet the issue thus presented? Are they willing to be made the scapegoats of Mr. BEN. MANIERRE, or Mr. HENRY SMITH, or "Gen." JOHN COCHRANE? Are these gentlemen ready to hand over the State and National Governments to Tammany Hall, because the President, in the exercise of his constitutional right, and for reasons satisfactory to himself and to nine-tenths of his party in this City, removed them from office?

Mr. GREELEY knows, even better than any one else can know, how pitiful his defense is. He knows that his Committee is animated by an intense hostility to the National Administration. He knows that it is the purpose of the handful of Tammany hirelings, whom he facetiously calls the "Republican General Committee," at all hazards, and at any cost, to defeat the renomination of Gen. GRANT, or, failing in that, to defeat his re-election.

That is the simple truth, and Mr. GREELEY, as I have said, knows it.

He is undoubtedly a man of rare courage, but I doubt if even he would not quail before the fierce storm of indignation which the frank avowal of the policy of his Committee would evoke from the readers of the Tribune.

It is full time that the lion's skin were stripped from the shoulders of this Committee, and the measure taken of the ears of the animal masquerading beneath it. MORE ANON.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Aug. 7, 1871.

What Might Have Been Done.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I beg leave to aid you in your calculations. Thus far you have unearthed $10,000,000. How much remains to be dug up the future editions of the TIMES alone can develop. In order that the good people of our "fresh-water village" may appreciate the economy of Philadelphia by comparison with that of your salt-water Metropolis, let me call your attention to what Philadelphia has done with some of its public appropriations.

By the report of the Philadelphia Board of Public Education, just issued, it appears that contracts for the erection of fourteen handsome school edifices have been given out during the past year, amounting in the aggregate to $395,266. These fourteen edifices contain 178 class-rooms, accommodating about 8,900 children. It has cost the City of New-York in the past two years, for the alleged furnishing, plastering, &c., of the Court-houses and armories, nearly $10,000,000.

Upon the basis of the above expenditures for public school buildings, the ten million dollars would suffice to erect buildings capable of accommodating 265,194 pupils. In other words, more buildings could be erected with the funds spent in New-York for carpets, furniture, plumbing, &c., in two years, than would be needed to erect new buildings for all the public school children in daily attendance in the four cities of New-York, Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore.

Let me turn the figures in another way. These luxuriant carpets, &c., costing nearly ten millions of dollars, would educate the eighty-one thousand pupils in the public schools of Philadelphia, paying all the annual expenses of teachers, furniture, books, supplies, &c., for more than four years. Or it would be more than sufficient to pay the salaries of the 1,539 teachers now actually teaching in this city for thirteen years. A. B.

A Story of the Horse-Cars.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Rowdyism has not entirely departed from the horse-cars. Last Saturday I was a passenger in one of the Sixth-avenue cars, which passed Twenty-sixth-street about 1 P. M., going uptown. A man, having a rowdy appearance, was smoking on the front platform—a habit which is far too common on the horse-cars. I requested the conductor to stop it, and apparently he attended to his duty. Still the rowdy kept on smoking. I then requested him personally to stop smoking, as it was very offensive. The follow threatened me with personal violence. I said, "If you belong to the Foster tribe, let me know it, and I will be prepared for you." He went on with his abuse and threats, which the conductor did not notice. Having occasion to get off at Twenty-sixth-street, I ordered the car to stop. I left by the rear platform. The rowdy left by the front platform and followed me in the street. The car meanwhile stopped entirely still. Let the reader mark this. I knew that an assault was intended, and was preparing for it. Before I proceed further with my story, let me say that, after the Foster trial, when it was found that there was a Judge sufficiently corrupt to shield him from the punishment decreed by the law, contrary to the usual precedents of the Courts, I concluded not to ride any more in the horse-cars without being armed. Accordingly, I was prepared for the rowdy named above. As I placed my foot upon the sidewalk, after leaving the car, I dropped my weapon upon the pavement. The rowdy was probably six paces distant. I stooped quickly to pick up the instrument, and upon turning round I found the rowdy was beating a retreat to the car, which was evidently waiting for his return. The driver was, no doubt, culpable for this, as he seemed to be on intimate terms with the rowdy in question. I am sorry I cannot give the number of the car, as I am sure such a driver would be at once discharged from the service of the Sixth-avenue cars. If Judge PRATT wishes to find one here carrying a deadly weapon, I will furnish him with my name. A wish to protect myself against his special friends will be my justification. CITIZEN.

The Yellow Fever of New-Orleans.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In one of the recent issues of the TIMES we noticed an article on the yellow fever, in which it was stated, as it has become customary to do, that New-Orleans was cured of that disease by Gen. BUTLER. The idea seems to be that that city, and perhaps the whole country, has been freed from a great scourge by a simple process of drainage, an operation which, at the time the General was placed in command of the city, must have been either a very tedious or a very shrewd one, since the streets were generally below the level of the river.

It must be admitted, however, that the drainage and cleansing of cities, as well as the ventilation of rooms and cellars, are very necessary to health, and especially for the prevention of fevers, but the yellow fever has often prevailed where the drainage has been good. There are other causes beside neglected police which produce and harbor that disease. Some of the prominent traits of the disease are, first, it seldom extends far beyond the sea-board; second, where it prevails it moves from one locality to a neighboring one very slowly; third, women and men who lead regular lives, and are not exposed to the hot sun and out-door influences, are not so often attacked by it as others; fourth, it is somewhat like ship fever, and has indeed been thought to be a ship fever of the most malignant kind, generated in the crowded holds of African slavers during their passages to Brazil and Cuba, or perhaps some Southern State, and communicated from them to New-Orleans, while the ships, discharged of their live cargoes, went to take in another of cotton.

Supposing this to be the case, there are other reasons besides drainage, why New-Orleans should have been more exempt from the disease during the war than at any previous period. Because, in the first place, nearly all that class of men who led irregular lives, among whom the fever would naturally take and work, had gone to join the rebel ranks; second, the out-door business of the city was nearly stopped, the trade on the wharves having ceased, so that almost everybody remained much of the time within doors, and third, slave-ships from Brazil and Cuba had no longer any object in coming to New-Orleans, and were strictly quarantined if they did.

We venture to predict that though New-Orleans may never become wholly exempt from yellow fever, yet from the decline of the slave-trade, and the general use of cooling beverages now brought within the reach of the poorest citizens by recent inventions for the cheap production of ice, the disease will henceforth be greatly mitigated and diminished. The principal causes, however, leading to this end, have in no way originated with or been materially aided by Gen. BUTLER. The agency of the General in that direction, as in many others, is chiefly mythical, of a politico-masonic character, which, though quite in common use of late years, is rather too unsubstantial for practical purposes.

Respectfully yours, J. W. PHELPS.

Sensible Suggestions for the Public Meeting.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

As one of the signers of the call for a public meeting to consider the condition of our City under its present rulers, and to take measures to meet the evil, and fully impressed with the importance and necessity for prompt, vigorous action, I still feel anxious lest the meeting may fail in its object, through a misunderstanding of what the public want. The mere calling of them together, denunciation of fraud and corruption, and pledging them to the cause of reform, will amount to nothing unless the leaders of this call prepare beforehand a list of twenty-five citizens to act as a committee to investigate these charges of fraud and corruption, and to demand and insist upon a rigid, searching examination of the books and accounts which are the property of the people, and to give the results to the public. This Committee must consist of bold, fearless men in good standing, not to be bought, sold or scared—men of nerve and energy, with love for their City, and a determination to do their work thoroughly and honestly. It must have no politicians of any school in its ranks, and no prominent men of wealth, who can be choked into silence through the grasp the Ring have upon their property. Let this Committee have the power to ask the public for money, and to employ the best counsel, and if they are hampered and interfered with in their work, let them call upon the public to aid them, and you may rest assured the public will respond. After the public have got "the facts," they will soon decide what to do with those proven guilty. There is and can be no question that we have but pricked the surface of the mass of corruption which underlies our present City Government; did the people know one-half that could be told, the present mutterings would soon grow into growls, and from that into "revolution." When murderers can go unhung and thieves be set free, when Court-house jobs can flourish, and the liberties of the people be controlled by the Mayor, then it is time for the public to awake; and if those in authority think they still sleep, let them but tempt them but one step further, and watch the result. As a citizen, I thank you for the bold, manly course you have taken. I know and care nothing for the charges the Mayor brings against you, only know you are doing the public a good and lasting service. I have written these lines to you in the hope that their perusal may induce you to watch with care the formation and progress of that reform which the public are called upon to make, and that you will see to it, as far as lies in your power, that no mistakes occur that can lead to disaster. A CITIZEN OF NEW-YORK.

Washington Park.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A day or two since, a correspondent of your journal very cleverly hit off the manner in which our City authorities "improve" some of the parks. He instanced Washington Park, which has been cut into a labyrinth of concrete walks, and all its quiet beauties rooted out in order that some sand, pitch and mortar contractor might line his pockets (after paying the instalment due to the corruption fund,) by the gross and palpable disfigurement of this public breathing-place. But he omitted to mention the blinding dazzle of an endless array of improved lamps, the furnishing of which must have realized a mint to the happy contractor. Why this glittering extravagance? One cannot approach the park without being sensibly amazed at the prodigality of lamp-lights, which only offend the eyes, and confounded by the tortuous pathways which either return to the starting point or end abruptly at an angle. Can we not have the items of cost for converting into an obtrusive public highway a part of which was once a charming solitude, where the birds were not afraid to sing, nor vegetation checked by excessive light? THE DIRTY STREETS.

Shocking Sanitary Condition of New-York—A Pestilence Invited.

There is much just now in the City to promote an epidemic among the people; and should it once secure a foothold, it will, under the present shockingly filthy condition of the streets carry death and misery into hundreds of families. There seems to be no disposition on the part of the sanitary authorities to improve the condition, or to adopt any measures which might tend toward averting such a calamity as the presence of cholera in this City just now would prove. We have no cuteries about surplus filth for it lies within the purlieus inhabited by the lower half-million of the City's population, who have long since learned the futility of asking benefits with any view of receiving them. It is noticeable that the more respectable and aristocratic quarters of the City are kept decidedly clean, that there may be no grumbling among those who pay heavy taxes.

But down among the poor and miserable the condition of things from a similar point of view is simply shocking. A TIMES reporter has made an extended examination of various quarters of the City, and finds filth in abundance. One prominent feature is a vast collection of decaying and rotten vegetable matter collected at groceries and small variety shops of every kind. This matter gives out a noisome odor. On the western side of the City there is much of this all the way from Washington Market—which will be a great accumulation, and constant—by increasing stock of decaying fruit, is in a terrible state,—up to the extreme northern portion of the thickly settled districts. In addition to this there is an accumulation of street filth which is positively alarming.

A large number of the streets are in sad need of repair, and here and there great holes have appeared and in them dirty, stagnant water has stood for months, until the greenish collection on the top has hinted of disease and death. Between Seventh and Eighth avenues, from Sixteenth-street upward, this is particularly noticeable, and the domestic habits of a large proportion of the people who live there is of such a character as to augment rather than lessen the provocatives to epidemic. In Seventeenth-street, between Sixth and Seventh avenues, a large quantity of poultry is running about at will, and lends much aid in keeping up an intensity of filth. In West Twentieth-street there are several deposits of noxious filth in the middle of the street. This street is sadly in need of new paving—so much so that the authorities have been compelled to threaten the tax-payers with another job. Nineteenth-street, east of Eighth-avenue, is very dirty, not with a collection of dry refuse, but a damp, slimy deposit so detrimental to public health. Below Fourteenth-street, on the west, there is disease-producing accumulations enough to stock half a dozen cities abundantly. West-street, Washington and Greenwich have their complements, and the cross thoroughfares are amply supplied with filth.

A vigorous reform is sadly needed, and that at once, in the matter of removing garbage from the streets. The cartmen who now remove it are very neglectful and careless, and to their laxity may be attributed much of the filth accumulation. The garbage boxes are not fully emptied, and the collections of weeks and months remain at the bottom and send forth such distressing stench as to be almost unbearable. Liquid as well as dry matters are thrown into these receptacles, and from many of them oozes the very quintessence of nastiness.

The lower and eastern part of the City seems to have increased in its wretchedness in this year within the past week or two. Below Canal-street is the fountain-head, and the people who inhabit that section are, so far as their personal habits are concerned, in full keeping with the general condition of that place. All the streets lying within the Sixth, Fourteenth, and a greater portion of those within the Fourth and Seventh Wards, are in a condition which positively beggars description. Mulberry-street is decidedly dangerous to pass through, and it is the principal thoroughfare leading directly from the office of the Sanitary Police. Mott-street and Elizabeth-street are equal to it in filth, and have the appearance of not having been cleaned within the last six months. Many portions of these streets are covered with a slimy kind of dirt which has long lain there.

The residents of the neighborhoods show no disposition to keep matters any better than they are, but unless prompt and energetic measures are at once adopted the City will be struck with a pestilence such as will be long remembered by those who escape its ravages. The City is in a ripe condition for it; if it gets under way its ravages will be fearful.

ILLINOIS.

Success of the Chicago River Improvement—Political Matters—The Municipal Dead-Lock—Powers of the Mayor—The Street-Tunnel—Miscellaneous Matters.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Thursday, Aug. 3, 1871.

The success of the river experiment continues to be a theme of congratulation among our citizens. Chicago River is purified, and there is no good reason why it should not continue so. The deaths in the month of July were 119 less than for the corresponding period last year; but it would be altogether absurd to ascribe this great difference to the condition of the river alone. July, 1870, was an excessively hot month with us, and the "slaughter of the innocents" was fearful. This year it has been comparatively cool and pleasant. But we did anticipate a marked effect upon the health of the city as one result of this great enterprise.

The exposé by the TIMES of the unparalleled corruption and robbery of the New-York Ring is exciting a profound interest in this section of the country. Everybody knew that it was a most rascally governed City, but there was no general idea abroad as to the enormous extent of the knavery until the TIMES lifted the veil. We are interested in such matters in Chicago. For many years the stealing has been going on here. It began on a small scale at first, but it has already reached large proportions. The exposition which has been made of New-York practices will serve to open the eyes of our tax-payers, as it shows them to what they are coming if our Ring is permitted to rule the City in the future. The TIMES deserves the thanks of the whole country—and especially of all friends of honesty in the administration of municipal government, for the fearlessness and ability with which it has managed this business.

Political matters are moving a little with us. Since Gov. OGLESBY declined a nomination for Congressman at large, quite a number of new aspirants have taken the field. Among them Hon. JESSE K. DUBOIS and Hon. W. BUSHNELL, Attorney-General of the State, have been named. As Chicago has both of the Senators now, Mr. LOGAN having recently become a resident here, she will not put in any candidate, although Hon. JOSEPH MEDILL has an itching for the place.

The dead lock between the Mayor and the Common Council, relative to the appointment of Bridewell Commissioners, still continues. The Mayor sent in new nominations, but they did not belong to the "Whisky Ring," and they were rejected. This difficulty, together with the corrupt and rascally practices of the majority of the Council, will have a tendency to make a "People's ticket" inevitable at the Fall election. The indications more and more point in that direction every day. There is already a strong feeling in favor of Hon. JAMES B. BRADWELL, late Probate Judge, as an independent candidate for Mayor. He is just such a man as the times demand to be at the head of our municipal affairs—though we have so many Boards and departments in our City Government that the Mayor has but little power. There are the School, Police and Health Boards, the Board of Public Works, and the Water Commissioners, all of whom have complete control of their several departments, and the Common Council choses its own President, so that the Mayor has but little to do except to preserve his dignity and issue licenses for liquor saloons.

The La Salle-street tunnel is at length completed, and fully opened for foot travelers and vehicles. This is a most important improvement, as it forms a sure connection with the North-western Railroad. Heretofore passengers were always in danger of being too late by the opening of the bridges. The cost of the work has been in the neighborhood of $400,000.

The weather has been excessively warm for the past few days, and the farmers tell us it is necessary to have it continue to bring corn to maturity, as the cool weather of July put it back—or rather did not bring it forward—as much as was desirable.

The peach crop of Southern Illinois has been enormous this year; but the quality has been quite inferior. Our market has been bountifully supplied, many car-loads arriving every day. The St. Joseph crop is later, and with the exception of a few of the earlier sort, have not begun to arrive. About the 20th we shall begin to have another avalanche from that quarter, though it is understood that the yield is light compared with some other years. Our capitalists are taking up what national bank stock they can get hold of, from the last authorization which was assigned to the Southern States, but not taken there. Two new national banks have recently been established in this city, the Cook County Bank and the National Bank of Illinois, with a capital limited to two million dollars.

The Great Pacific Hotel has got up to its sixth story, which is the last. It has been pushed forward with great vigor, and when the roof is on the structure will make an imposing appearance. The new and elegant building of the Lake-Side Printing and Publishing Company, nearly adjoining, is going up quite rapidly. POTTER PALMER'S magnificent hotel moves slowly, having only reached the first story. Among the noticeable improvements in the city, the reconstructed McVicker's Theatre is conspicuous. It has been remodeled without and within, and is now capable of seating 1,850 persons. It has been greatly improved in convenience and ornamentation.

Real estate is rather dull, and so is business generally. There was, last week, a row among the coal-dealers, and for a brief period hard coal touched $7 50, the lowest it has been known for years. The ruling price, however, is again $8 50. The lowest point reached last year was $10.

CHINESE COOLIES.

Shocking Stories of the Means and Incidents of Emigration from Macao.

Papers lately laid before the English Parliament contain some recent correspondence relating to the conduct of emigration from the Portuguese colony of Macao. Very shocking accounts were published in the Honolulu papers of the treatment and condition of coolies on board the Dolores Ugarte, which left Macao for Peru last year with 608 on board, and had lost 270 of "her chattels" before reaching her destination. In another case, that of the Nouvelle Pénélope, which left Macao for Peru with 310 coolies, they rose upon the crew, seized the ship, went back to China, and after landing and pillaging the vessel, abandoned her, the leaders making their way again to Macao to re-engage for another ship, and, it is supposed, to endeavor to repeat their piracy. Mr. ROBERTSON, British Consul at Canton, in dispatches to the Foreign Office, dated the 17th of November, 1870, and the 4th of April, 1871, observes that the case of the Dolores Ugarte is one of great atrocity, but that he fears there have been many similar cases in this traffic in men under the guise of emigration. Macao and its people, he says, flourish exceedingly upon the proceeds of this export of human merchandise. There are at Macao five agencies for Cuba and South American States on the Pacific seaboard, representing firms in those countries to whom coolies are consigned, and who dispose of them on arrival to the highest bidder. These agents employ Chinese sub-agents, who go into the interior and procure men, and bring them into the barracoon of their employer. They have to be taken before a Government officer, and asked if they are willing to emigrate. This seems fair, but when from $75 to $100 is paid by an agency for each Chinese shipped, kidnapping will be practised; and Mr. ROBERTSON maintains that, besides observing these strict formalities, the Portuguese Government should have some regard for the good name and repute of the local Government of Macao. In the case of the Nouvelle Pénélope men, he says, the keepers of the barracoons knew perfectly well that the men they received for embarcation had only a few days before been shipped in that vessel, which became the scene of robbery and murder. The Consul states that however well the Macao Government regulations may look upon paper, it is evident that coolie emigration is simply a slave trade, and a disgrace to any Christian Government that permits it within its jurisdiction. A regular traffic in human beings is carried on for the supply of the barracoons. If the Portuguese Government could be induced to adopt such rules as those in force for British emigration, and faithfully carry them into effect, Mr. ROBERTSON believes that much would be done to correct existing evils; and the Portuguese Government has been made acquainted with the steps taken by the British Government to prevent similar atrocities being perpetrated on board coolie ships sailing from Hong Kong. Consul ROBERTSON adds that the French and Italian Governments are highly to blame for allowing their flag to cover such proceedings, nor are these countries alone to blame. The paper called the Java Bandelstad gives an account of the treatment and disposal of Chinese coolies landed at Java from ship-wrecked or burnt vessels from Macao, and if this be true the same disregard for human sufferings appears to prevail in the Dutch colony as in Macao. The substance of Mr. ROBERTSON'S dispatches has been communicated to the Portuguese Government, and the Portuguese Minister for Foreign Affairs promised to bring the matter under the serious attention of the new Governor of Macao, who then (in June) was still in Lisbon, and whom the Minister describes as "a young man, and therefore more inclined to feel for the sufferings inflicted by this system of traffic in human beings."

THIEVES IN OFFICE.

A Leading Democratic Paper of the West States its Opinion of Them.

From the Chicago Times, Aug. 6.

* * * The [Chicago] Times does think, however, because public opinion, or rather party opinion and party influence generally protect the office-holding thieves from the deserved fate of the "gutter-rats," that one of the highest duties of a free public Press is, by denunciation and exposure of office-holding thieves, to hold them up to public reprobation. In doing this, with respect to the office-holding thieves in New-York, the Press of that City is doing society and the country and the cause of public justice a more important service than the Press of that City has ever before done.

It is perfectly immaterial whether they be called "Democratic" administrations, or "Republican" administrations. The Government functionary who is a thief is not a Democrat, but is the worst enemy of Democracy that society holds. Whether the Government functionary who is a thief is or can be a "Republican," is a question for the Republican Party to answer.

Doubtless there are men calling themselves "Democrats," and frequently getting themselves nominated to office by so-called Democratic conventions and caucuses, who suppose that stealing is one of the special privileges of public office-holders. And there are any persons calling themselves "Republicans," and getting themselves nominated by "Republican" caucuses, and elected by so-called Republican voters, who hold and practice a similar opinion! How is it in Chicago? Are the office-holding thieves who have stolen $20,000 from the tax-payers of Chicago, in defiance of the supreme Law, to subsidize a German newspaper in the interest which professes to own "the German votes," are these thieves, elected by "Republican" voters, "Republicans?"

The [Chicago] Times flatly denies that the office-holding thieves in New-York are Democrats, no matter how many well-packed caucuses may have nominated them and elected them. The time is past when the label of some gathering of blacklegs, pimps and thieves in a whisky den can be accepted as a certificate of Democracy. When, last Fall, some persons bearing such labels appeared in Chicago asking for votes to put them in places where they would have better opportunities to steal, Democrats chose to exercise the right of free citizens by ignoring the labels and examining the packages themselves. The examination did not prove satisfactory and the labels went for naught. One, at least, of the individuals wearing the caucus label has since been convicted and sentenced to the State Prison for swindling; a circumstance indicating that there is danger in accepting caucus-packages according to their labels.

The people of New-York ought to be convinced by this time that caucus packages are apt to be a bad lot, and that though labeled "Democrats," or "Republicans," the contents may turn out to be thieves, and that, considering all the facts and unsatisfactory experiences resulting from the election of thieves to public office, it is high time to take a new departure.

A Desperate Fight Between a Virginia County Attorney and a Carpenter.

A personal encounter took place at Culpepper Court-house, Va., on Saturday last, between Mr. L. L. LEWIS, Commonwealth's Attorney, and a Mr. CARNEAL, a carpenter. A correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch describes the affair thus: "The latter met Mr. LEWIS on the street, and accused him of assailing his private character in Court. LEWIS tried to explain to him that he had only done his duty for the Commonwealth. CARNEAL then struck him with a hatchet on the hip. Then a regular fight ensued. They were separated, and Mr. LEWIS went to his office and returned with a friend to where CARNEAL was at work, and challenged him for a fair fist fight. CARNEAL came out with a hatchet in his hand, and refused to put it down, and accused LEWIS the second time of scandalising him in Court. LEWIS then called him a 'liar,' and CARNEAL returned it. LEWIS then threw a stone at him, and CARNEAL threw his hatchet at LEWIS. LEWIS is dodged, and gathering the hatchet, made for him. CARNEAL ran some distance, but LEWIS, getting in proper distance, threw the hatchet at him but missed his aim. Then a strugge ensued for the hatchet, which CARNEAL managed to get hold of, inflicting a severe wound in the back of LEWIS, also a severe wound in the forehead, which knocked him senseless. They were then parted, which ended the fight. Mr. LEWIS was carried to a house near by and proper medical assistance procured. His wounds, though severe, it is thought will not prove fatal."

Mr. BRENTANO (No. 33 Union-square) has received Tinsley's Magazine for August, the World of Fashion, and the first of a series of a new works called The Best of Good Company, by BLANCHARD JERROLD. This number contains a number of scraps about CHARLES DICKENS. It is to be followed by a life of Sir WALTER SCOTT.

THE WESTFIELD EXPLOSION.

Additional Testimony of Experts—New and Strange Theories Advanced.

The investigation before the United States Steam-boat Inspectors into the cause of the explosion of the boiler of the Westfield was continued yesterday at the United States Circuit Court-room, and considerable testimony was taken. The Committee of Experts, who have examined portions of the boiler submitted to them and the steam-gauge and safety-valve, were not ready to report in consequence of the absence of Mr. COPELAND in Philadelphia, but it is expected that their report will be submitted today. The witnesses yesterday were put upon the stand, merely to consume the time until the experts can report, and when the result of that examination is submitted the investigation by the Steam-boat Inspectors on behalf of the United States will be concluded. Then the report will be made to the Secretary of the Treasury, and the matter ended so far as any responsibility which may attach to Inspector MATHEWS is concerned. The Coroner's jury will have to deal with the criminal side of the question; the verdict of the Inspectors will decide simply the responsibility of Inspector MATHEWS and determine the actual cause of the explosion. If the conclusion of the Inspectors should be that the boiler was properly inspected on the 12th of June, then Mr. MATHEWS is cleared. If it should appear that the engineer neglected his duty and exceeded his instructions by carrying one pound—or even a fraction thereof—beyond the limit allowed by the Inspector's certificate, HENRY ROBINSON will be for all future time debarred from manipulating any engine of a steam-boat run in the waters of the United States. It is for the Coroner's jury to fasten the responsibility beyond these points. They may find that the blame rested upon the Superintendent of the Ferry Company, Capt. BRAISTED, for employing a man manifestly so ignorant as the negro, HENRY ROBINSON, and may conclude that the engineer, as well as the Superintendent, was criminally negligent. In this case both may be indicted for manslaughter, and the money damages which the Staten Island Ferry Company may be obliged to pay will be something enormous.

The Testimony Yesterday.

The first witness yesterday was Capt. JAMES GORMLEY, who testified as follows: I am a steam-boat man on Western rivers; reside at St. Louis; have seen the boiler of the Westfield; examined it carefully; my belief is that the cause of the explosion was a stoppage of the supply of water at a given point; another is the age of the boiler; the third was the conduct of the engineer in being absent from the engine-room; he had control of the feed-cock; the apparent difference in the explosion caused by the injection of cold water; the fracture began on the starboard side first.

EX-INSPECTOR BERRYMAN.

The next witness was Mr. BERRYMAN, who inspected the Westfield's boiler July 9, 1870: At that time I had a patch put on the water-bottom and steam-chimney; I was a United States Inspector of Boilers at that time; I put the pressure on after the patches were put on; I left the boiler in good condition after the hydrostatic test of thirty-seven pounds; Mr. BERRYMAN, the Superintendent, refused to put these patches on when I ordered them on, and we had quite a quarrel on the subject; however, my orders were obeyed; don't know personally what was done on it after that; I could not give any idea now as to the strain on each square inch at thirty-seven pounds hydrostatic test; I would rely on my judgment as to the pressure a boiler would stand; I do not know the rule governing tensile strain; I always set the valves by steam.

Examined by Mr. BOOLE—I helped to build boilers and engines; I don't know how large a safety-valve should be in proportion to the bearing surface; I cannot give the rule for calculating the square inches of a safety-valve if I have the diameter and circumference; I could not calculate the steam pressure if I had all the data; I refused to inspect or give a certificate to the Westfield until the repairs were made; I expect I signed the certificate afterward; I do not know that I ever signed one for a steamer I had not inspected myself; Mr. MATHEWS did not offer one over my veto; I was an assistant inspector; the primary cause of the explosion I believe to have been that Mr. MATHEWS did not put on the hydrostatic pressure he swore to; I do not believe he put thirty-four pounds on her; I don't think he looked at his test gauge; the reason I say so is, I refused to pass the steam-ship North America because she hadn't sufficient pumps; I don't want to say how large the pump was; I told them at the office that she couldn't go to sea until another was put on board; I met MATHEWS in the office a few days afterward, and he told Capt. LEFEBRE not to mind me, that he would take care that she went to sea; I don't believe he went on board of her previous to that, and knew nothing about the size of the pump; I think he was in office the year before; I reported this to the office, and forbade the clerk to make out the certificate, as I would not sign it; MATHEWS put my name to that certificate and sent it to the Custom-house; I could not say that he swore to it over my name, although he must have; I know nothing about the letter which appeared in the Sunday papers, that I swear; from the foregoing singular circumstance I infer that Mr. MATHEWS would have sworn to having tested the Westfield, although he never did it; I have had professional difficulties with MATHEWS of the same nature before, if you wish to hear them; I do not know how many cubic inches of water there is in a gallon, or anything about it; I could not tell you how I would know whether a pump was adequate to supply a boiler or not; I rely on my judgment as to whether a pump is adequate or not; there is no use of putting any questions to me about steam-pumps; I think without this knowledge I am competent to act as an inspector of steam-pumps; my experience in working at boilers and pumps has educated my judgment; I do not remember the time when my judgment would not serve in this; I would not pay much attention to rule when building a pump; the rules recognized by practical engineers to govern the repairs of engines I throw overboard altogether; I rely upon my own judgment in ordering repairs, in opposition to the theories of centuries.

WILLIAM BROMLEY.

WILLIAM BROMLEY, a constructing engineer and superintendent of iron-work, gave it as his opinion that the cause of the explosion was overpressure, not exceeding thirty pounds; I did not see any appearance of bad management; if there was a weak spot in the boiler, it would surely have gone off at twenty-seven pounds.

ROBINSON AGAIN.

ROBINSON, engineer, on being recalled, said there was a line from the safety-valve to the engine-room. He was then tested as to his power of reading figures, which he did readily.

BERRYMAN REFUTED.

CONNOLLY, the engineer of the Westfield, was recalled and testified: I am the engineer and boiler-maker referred to by Mr. BERRYMAN; I tested the Westfield in '69 instead of '70; he refused to test the boat because the socker-bolt leaked; Capt. BRAISTED has often warned me to be especially careful of the boat, after Mr. BERRYMAN's inspection, as he did not believe BERRYMAN would do his duty as an inspector, and never tried or adjusted the valves at all.

MR. WIARD.

NORMAN WIARD was next called and examined at some length. He gave as his theory that the explosion was caused by unequal expansion, and said that he had known a boiler explode which had no steam nor water in it, and the man-hole plate off. The explosion was, he said, caused by the ignition of an armful of shavings in one of the flues by the engineer, who had pursued that course in order to start some scales on the inside flues. Mr. WIARD said that the boiler was torn in twain, and the rear portion was thrown some twenty feet by the force of the explosion. The investigation was adjourned until 10 o'clock today.

Why Did the Westfield Explode?

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Either from defective iron, or too much pressure. But all the evidence goes to show that the boiler was not defective. In the popular mind, and even among steam-boiler men, it seems to be taken for granted that ordinary steam pressure was not increasing in this case, because the safety-valve was open, and therefore we are called upon to accept the theory of low water, red-hot flues, decomposition of water, and the sudden voluminous generation of highly-elastic gases additional to the steam. Or else we are called upon to believe in the sudden superoration of some unknown mysterious power, electrical or whatever it may be, called into action by some equally mysterious change of conditions within the boiler. What were the conditions here? There was a full head of steam, and the boat was "fired up" for a start at the usual time. The engineer, in his routine way, had doubtless "pumped up," and in the same routine, the firemen had replenished the fuel. The Captain did not follow his routine; he waited (we are told) to get sight of the incoming boat. The question then is, Was the safety-valve adequate to discharge steam as fast as made? If not, explosion would be certain, if the fire was kept up. But would not any engineer testify that the boat could be so "fired up" as to "blow off" while running and using up two cylinders of steam every revolution? If so, then the cylinders and the number of revolutions possible while still "blowing off" will be the measure of the possible accumulation at the dock when ready for a start. That this was the case is possible, but not demonstrable, for unfortunately no one saw the steam-gauge. At this critical juncture the engineer was absent. Like too many others, he was deceived by the name "safety-valve." It is a safety-valve only in indicating to the engineer that he must either get rid of his surplus steam or of his fire. It is not an automatic arrangement to supersede watchfulness. The writer once showed to the late Mr. STEVENS an automatic arrangement for withdrawing the fire under similar circumstances. Said he: "Automatic regulators will insure explosions, because everything human is imperfect, and liable to derangement; there must be brains somewhere." In the case of the Westfield the brains were away from the engine-room and on the dock, deceived by the belief that so long as the steam escaped at the safety-valve, all was well.

There is only one other mode of accounting for the explosion, if we lay aside the quality of the boiler and the above theory. That is low water, red-hot flues, and the decomposition of water. But an explosion from this cause would occur only in one of three modes. Either the red-hot softened iron would yield to simple steam pressure, (collapse,) or if gas was generated, it would be when the red-hot iron was overflowed either by the pump or by the motion of the boat in leaving the dock. And then the boiler would have yielded at the flue also, even if in an additional place. The more I reflect on this disaster the more am I impressed with the belief that the cause of it was the accumulation of steam from the delay in starting, an accumulation which could scarcely have happened if the engineer had not been absent from his post. No quality of apparatus will permit careless use of it. Mr. STEVENS' words ought to be engraven on the memory and conscience of every one having to do with steam-boilers: "Automatic regulators insure explosions; there must be brains somewhere." R.

The Turner Festival—The Proceedings Yesterday.

Owing to the unfavorable condition of the weather yesterday the members of the Turner Congress assembled at Myrtle-avenue Park in the morning. A large number of the guests and their Williamsburg hosts met, however, at Turner Hall, in Meserole-street, and passed the morning hours in social conversation. At 1 P. M. the sun came out in all his accustomed splendor, and it was determined to go to the Park. At 2 o'clock the company had reached that place and the exercises commenced; they consisted of gymnastic performances—on bars, polls, the trapeze, spring bounds, and of rifle shooting.

The sport was kept up until 5 o'clock, when all parties returned to the city. A similar programme will be carried out today, at the conclusion of which the prizes will be awarded. Last night the guests were entertained with a theatrical performance at Turner Hall, terminating with a series of classic tableaux. The interest of the German population in the demonstration shows no sign of abatement; indeed, the Teutonic element of the Eastern District seems entirely given up to jollification.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS,

The attendance at the Exchange, yesterday, was very slim. Messrs. A. J. BLEECKER, SON & Co. sold, by order of the executors of ANNA DAVIS, deceased, the two-story frame house and lot, 26 by 85 by 100, on the east side of Greenwich-street, 20 feet north of Main-street, Astoria, Long Island. There was no competition for it, and the parties in interest had to buy it in themselves. It was struck down for $2,100 to Mr. JOHN J. JONES.

Mr. WM. KENNELLY sold all the right, title and interest of CHARLES N. KINNEY to silver-mining stock and land in Monroe and Pike Counties, Pennsylvania, to CHARLES BOYD, for $100. To-day no public sale of real estate is announced to take place at the Exchange. Should anything of interest transpire, however, it will be fully noted in our report of to-morrow.

PROPOSALS FOR THE WATER LOAN
OF THE
CITY OF PROVIDENCE.
INTEREST
IN GOLD, AT FIVE OR SIX PER CENT.,
AS MAY BE DECIDED.

THE CITY OF PROVIDENCE PROPOSES TO ISSUE ITS BONDS PAYABLE IN GOLD
on the 1st day of July, in the year Nineteen Hundred, (1900,) for FOUR MILLIONS OF DOLLARS of, the purpose of defraying the expense of introducing water into said city.

INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

Coupons, payable in Gold, July 1 and Jan. 1, will be attached to the bonds for the interest thereon, or the bonds may be registered under existing law and the interest payable in gold, on said dates.

AUTHORITY FOR ISSUE.

The bonds are issued under authority given by the General Assembly of Rhode Island, and an ordinance passed by the City Council of Providence.

SECURITY.

Their payment is guaranteed by a lien—first, upon all the real estate or personal property owned by the city, and, secondly, upon all the real estate of the citizens of said city.

The income derived from the use of the water is also pledged to the payment of the bonds and the interest thereon.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF CITY.

The financial condition of the city on the 1st day of July inst. was as follows:

Taxable valuation of real estate	$63,515,713 00
Taxable valuation of the personal estate, 1870	40,585,100 00
Total taxable property	$104,080,813 00
Property exempted from taxation, owned by the city, institutions, &c., but held for the Water loan	$5,481,662 00
Total value	$109,562,475 00

CITY DEBT.

The funded debt of the city is as follows:

1st. A loan to the Hartford, Providence and Fishkill Railroad Company, due Jan. 1, 1876	$500,000 00
To meet this the city holds the same amount of the bonds of said railroad secured by a first mortgage upon the road in Rhode Island, and also funds in the hands of the Trustees of the Sinking Fund of this loan amounting to $114,684 07.
2d. A loan issued in 1855 for public improvements of various kinds made prior to that date, payable Sept. 1, 1885, for	600,000 00
To meet this the Trustees of this Sinking Fund have in their hands securities amounting to $283,478 34.
In addition to which there is an annual payment to this fund by the city, of $10,000.
3d. A loan issued in 1863 for expenses growing out of the enlistment of soldiers, payment of bounties, &c., payable Jan. 1, 1893, for	200,000 00
To meet this the Trustees of this Sinking Fund have in their hands securities amounting to $90,242 31.
In addition to which there is an annual payment to this fund by the city of $ 5,000.
4th. The floating debt incurred for public works, such as opening streets, erecting public buildings and introducing the water for which it is proposed to issue these bonds, amounting to	1,560,000 00
Of this sum the Water Commissioners have drawn	$1,000,000
There is cash on hand	325,000 —1,325,000 00
Leaving the actual floating debt, say	235,000 00

An examination of the above statement shows that the funded debt of the city is more than provided for, as the several sinking funds, with their collaterals, are sufficient, without the additional annual payments from the Treasury, to pay their respective loans at maturity.

The amount of the floating debt above what will be repaid from the sale of the water bonds is so small as to make it safe to say that the City of Providence with a valuation of $109,562,475, has no debt.

POPULATION.

The population of the city by the census of 1870 was 68,906, and is increasing more rapidly than at any previous period of her history, and there has been expended within the past seven years by the city for permanent public improvements more than $1,000,000.

With the above facts, the Water Loan of the City of Providence may be placed in the first class of securities, and is beyond a question.

CHARACTER OF PROPOSALS.

"The Committee of the City Council of the City of Providence on the City Debt" invite proposals for any portion of four millions of dollars of the Water Loan of said city, to be issued as per the annexed circular. Said proposals to be indorsed "Proposals for Water Loan," and to be transmitted sealed to Benjamin Tripp, City Treasurer of Providence, on or before 12 o'clock M., THURSDAY, the 24th day of August, 1871.

The proposals to be in the form hereunto annexed. Upon opening them the Committee will decide whether the loan shall be a five or six per cent. loan, and unless otherwise arranged, it will be payable at the City Treasurer's office in the City of Providence. The Committee reserve the right also to reject any or all of the bids at their discretion. The loan will be issued within sixty days from the opening of the proposals, and notice of the acceptance of any proposition will be transmitted at once to the party. The bonds are partly engraved and may be issued sooner than the above time if the labor on them can be completed. Interest from the 1st day of July to the date of issue, to be paid by the purchasers in currency at the rate of 1.10 for gold.

THOMAS A. DOYLE, Mayor,
AMOS W. SNOW,
NELSON W. ALDRICH,
STEPHEN WATERMAN,
WILLIAM BINNEY, } Committee.

FINANCIAL.

FIRST MORTGAGE
SINKING FUND
Land Grant Bonds
OF THE
ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY
RAILROAD COMPANY,
WESTERN DIVISION.

These Bonds can now be had from the undersigned, or through the principal banks and bankers of the United States.

They have thirty (30) years to run, bearing Eight per Cent. (8 per cent.) Interest, payable on the 15th days of August and February in each year. The Principal and Interest are payable in Gold. The Principal in New-York; the Interest in New-York, London and Frankfort-on-Main, free of tax. They are Coupon Bonds, but can be registered or converted into Registered Bonds, and are receivable at par and accrued interest in payment for the Company's land sales. The payment of the principal and interest is secured by a first and only mortgage on the Company's Lands, granted by the United States in 1868, lying on the line of this road, amounting to 1,500,000 acres, the railway of the Western Division, extending from Marysville, Kansas, to a junction with Union Pacific Road at Fort Kearney, a distance of 170 miles, together with the Equipments appertaining, Franchises, Rights of Way and Personal Property.

The mortgage is made to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New-York, as Trustees.

The Bondholders are amply protected by the terms of the Mortgage Deed, which prohibits a sale of the Company's lands at less than four ($4) dollars per acre, and a release of the lien of this Mortgage upon any portion sold until the purchase-money is paid to the Trustees, who are authorized to apply the same to the payment of these Bonds, either by purchase or to the Sinking Fund, for their redemption at maturity. This will more than extinguish the debt and leave the railway and equipments free. The security for the payment of these Bonds is therefore beyond all contingency.

The location of the line of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad is a commanding one, from the fact that it is a practical extension westwardly of the Hannibal and St. Joseph, the next Land Grant road after the Illinois Central. The St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad is fed at its eastern terminus (St. Joseph) by railway lines coming direct from Hannibal, St. Louis, Chicago, and local roads converging at St. Joseph. Its business is therefore secured. Its connection with the Union Pacific Road opens up the through middle route across the Continent, and is of national importance. This is reflected in the fact that the quantities of letters and telegrams which we have received during the few days the Bonds have been for sale, applying for these securities, indicate the quick response of the American people in support of internal improvements, while at the same time they make a good investment.

Price for the present, 97½ and accrued interest in currency.

Expressage relating to the Bonds free. Marketable Securities received in exchange.

We have been at great expense in the examination of this property and the bonds, and are satisfied the investments in this Loan will not only be safe but profitable. We base our calculations on the fact that the First Mortgage Bonds of this Company, on the Eastern Division, lately successfully placed by our firm at 97½, have advanced to 102 and accrued interest, making them rule at 106, or nearly ten per cent. advance.

Under all circumstances, we unhesitatingly recommend them.

SARATOGA.

The Season of 1871—Gossip of the Place—New Developments—The Last Sensation—Old Habitues—Saratoga Lake—Balls, Hops, &c.—The Coming Race Week.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SARATOGA, Thursday, Aug. 3, 1871.

It is many years since I last visited these pleasant springs and the great caravanseries, yet what I see there today is practically the same as what I saw then. New buildings have sprung up to meet the growing wants of the place. New hotels have been built, or old ones "repaired," (a wonderfully significant word nowadays;) but the people seem about the same. The monotonous routine of watering-place life has undergone no change, and the various mineral springs taste as much alike as they did years ago, to my unchemical palate. The same changing crowd, varying from day to day like the colored bits of glass in the kaleidoscope, surges through the hotel halls, clamors for something to eat in the dining-room, fills up the ball-room in the evening and in the early morning hours, snores loudly as of yore in the five hundred rooms. Now, as then, Saratoga could arrogate the title of being the capital of Fashion's realms; here the imperious ruler finds her most abject slaves ready to do her bidding; here she reigns in majesty and pomp, brimful of absurdities and monstrosities. One particular feature strikes nearly every observer alike, and is noted down as being the most noteworthy fact in connection with the season of 1871, and that is the absence of really pretty faces. Here at Congress Hall the exceptions to this rule could be counted on the fingers, and it is so at all the other hotels. It is suggested by a bachelor cynic that American women are degenerating, especially among the better classes of society that money; not beauty, is the requisite for belleship; they must have the ring of the true metal!

But I insist that this is an erroneous view, for wisdom has come with experience; late hours and endless gayety are no longer deemed the sine qua non of a Summer's holiday. What adds to health is found to add also to pleasure. The American girl of today seeks new roses for her soft cheeks among the lofty mountains, or on the banks of some inland lake, riding a gallant steed among the hills, roaming at will among the woods and forests of the valley, or plying energetically a pair of oars upon the surface of an American Windemere; there is where you must look for the fairest of the fair.

VISITORS THIS YEAR.

Apparently, there is no falling off in the number of visitors to Saratoga this year. In fact, up to date, the statistics show a large increase over the number of arrivals last season. August is, however, the busy month, and the middle of August is, therefore, the "height of the season." There is the usual large collection of notables, political and otherwise. But the millionaires are here in force. I saw representatives of about forty millions of capital promenading on the piazza the other evening, and not a plank stirred. Among others, I noticed A. T. Stewart, Gov. Hoffman, Col. Van Buren, Ex-Sheriff O'Brien, Demas Barnes, Gen. Babcock, Pay-master Cunningham, C. W. Durant, Senators Robertson and Sawyer, Col. Bridgland, Hon. William Wall, F. H. Lord, Rufus Andrews, R. H. Lowry, L. Anderson, G. Grainger and others. Then I notice many faces that have been here for years and years. But the growing characteristic of the visitors to Saratoga is wealth rather than anything else. Diamonds flash from morning until late at night, and hardly anything else. Undeterred by the "snake discovery" made by the enterprising gentleman who has served up an unusual number of sensational dishes this year, the visitors gulp down their half dozen tumblers of Congress-water before breakfast, and fear no snakes in the glass.

SARATOGA LAKE.

There are two drives really worth taking here—one is to the Geyser or spouting spring, and the other the drive to the lake. The first is really a natural curiosity, and well repays a visit. This spring has not been long known, I believe, and was struck at a depth of about 160 feet. The water is forced, by natural means entirely, to a height of about thirty feet from the ground. The water has a pleasant taste and is not as strong as the Congress. Spouting by night and spouting by day, this spring shows no signs of failing, and for aught known to the contrary it is likely to spout forever. A few more such outlets for what are known as the "pent-up forces of nature," and we can rest much easier, freed from the apprehension of sudden internal convulsions. The other drive is to Saratoga Lake, a spot well known to all visitors to Saratoga. What tourist has not eaten of the famous fried potatoes, or tested the merits of MOON's cobblers while sitting on the steep bank of this beautiful little lake? If anyone has not yet done it, they had better begin at once. My cynical friend proclaimed loudly his aversion to fried potatoes and "cobblers;" but when, after an unlimited amount of persuasion, the "General" had managed to dispose of his third plate and emptied his third glass, he condescended to remark sagely that "things were not always what they seemed;" a remark which, if not original, contains much wisdom.

RACING WEEK.

Racing week, which begins Wednesday, Aug. 16, is bringing to this place a number of sporting men anxious to see the racers before they decide on investments. The prospects for this meeting are remarkably good, and the two flyers, Longfellow and Kingfisher, are daily visited by crowds. They are in fine condition, and their four-mile contest promises to be an exciting one, as well as one remarkable among the annals of the turf. The stables are well filled, and many more are expected at the close of the Monmouth Park meeting. I append the programme for the week's sport.

THE OUTSTANDING DEBT.

Heavy Sums Owed by the City—How Honest Claims Were Slighted for Ring Jobs.

While the Mayor and Controller have been approving and paying the "exorbitant claims" of the Ring contractors, they have permitted a large outstanding debt to accumulate against the City and County. It is estimated that the bills which have been properly audited, but which remain unpaid as yet, will amount to upward of $4,000,000. Payment has been withheld on the bills in question for various reasons, the most potent one being the desire of the Ring to give money to their own particular favorites first. Political spite has also had a great deal to do with non-payment of the bills, as is witnessed in the case of the late firm of EDWARD JONES & Co., the leading partner of which excited the hostility of the Ring through his advocacy of the cause of the Young Democracy. After the latter party was conquered JONES & Co. felt the vengeance of TWEED and his coadjutors, and were strenuously refused the money due them for legitimate work, and for goods, which they, unlike another certain firm, actually supplied the City. An act passed the Legislature in April, 1870, authorizing the Controller to pay all claims which had been adjusted previous to the enactment of the law, and to pay all outstanding claims for printing, stationery and advertising within a period of sixty days. Although this act made it obligatory to settle the claims of JONES & Co., he continued to treat the petitioners with contempt. He did not decline, however, to promptly pay the bills of GARVEY, INGERSOLL, MILLER, KRYSER, and others, which were presented subsequently to those of JONES & Co. In view of the fact that a very large number of claims of a non-political character have been treated similar to those of Mr. JONES and his partners, the question has been asked, "Will the Controller dare to make public a clear and detailed account of the outstanding debts? The sum sought to be recovered by the firm in the suit lately brought by them only represents a small portion of the money actually owing them for printing and stationery. A very extensive number of law-books, Common Council documents, manuals Department reports and other expensive works were printed by the firm during 1867, 1868, 1869 and 1870, and a large supply of stationery was also furnished to the City by them in the same period. WILLIAM C. ROGERS & Co. succeeded JONES & Co. in the business, and continued to do work for the City; but the new firm was also unfortunate in procuring the payment of their bills. The total amount now due JONES & Co., and ROGERS & Co., is $1,222,473 96. When JONES & Co. commenced their test suit for a portion of the money it was the intention of the counsel to bring it before Judge SUTHERLAND, but they were ultimately compelled to have the hearing before Judge BARNARD. The firm of BROWN, HALL & VANDERPOEL was engaged by the Corporation Counsel to oppose the payment of the claims. It is some weeks ago since the motion of the plaintiffs for a mandamus was argued, but as yet no decision has been received from Judge BARNARD.

The job of furnishing the City with stationery is now carried on by a company in Duane-street, known as the "Manufacturing Stationers," and the printing is done by the infamous New-York Printing Company. These, together with the Transcript Association, swindle the City out of a very large amount of money. TWEED is the controlling power in all three companies, and his managers are CORNELIUS CORSON, CHAS. E. WILBOUR, MCLAUGHLIN and others.

Wretched Condition of the Artillery Armory on Elm-Street.

Yesterday a TIMES reporter gained access to the artillery armory on the corner of White and Elm streets. An examination of its exterior reveals a huge stone edifice, with long lancet windows, and great iron doors and shutters. Every pane of glass is shattered, and the fragments lie scattered about on all sides. The high iron fence surrounding it is rusty and dilapidated in the extreme, a portion of it is bent or completely broken down. Old shoes, bricks, filth, and rubbish are profusely distributed next the foundation walls. Almost every door and shutter is rusted or broken from the hinges, and the splintered sashes give good evidence of the marksmanship of the street urchins, who make them targets for brickbat practice. The interior is even worse. The walls are suffused with moisture, and in some places the water has worn out the mortar from between the bricks. The officers' room is covered by a green carpet—plastered with mud, and rotten with dampness. Two walnut and rep chairs, three larger chairs of the same style, two desks, some corroded gilt gas-fixtures, and two benches constitute the entire furniture. The original cost may have been $1,000; at present they are not worth one-third of that amount. The battery-room is just as filthy as it can be. The next floor is clear. Twelve cane-seat chairs is all the furniture there, and they are not worth $25. The roof is not plastered, and the bare rafters—once whitewashed—are like a sieve, through which the rains filter at will. Miserable gas-fixtures, suspended by rusty pipes, alone relieve the great blank space.

From conversation with Capt. KEIM, commanding Battery B, and Capt. JOHN N. HUEBNER, commanding Battery K, as well as with a number of the other members of the batteries, the following facts were gleaned: The members have paid for their furniture, gas-fixtures, coal, gas-lights, plumber's and carpenter's and other small repairs. The City has not done anything for them in seven years. The allowance per year for horse-hire is $200; the cost for every turn out is $250, which the members are obliged to pay. The gun-carriages and caissons are in a ricketty condition, and in case of an emergency would be liable to break into splinters. All the equipments except the guns are nearly as bad. "If we are wanted for the public defense, we go at the word. No men have done as much under such treatment as ours. But now we are disgusted and disheartened. Our military friends visit us, and see the ridiculous plight that we are in. It makes us ashamed. There is no such disgraceful condition of affairs elsewhere in the country. We have come here to drill when there was a foot of snow on the floor, and freezing cold. In any kind of a rain-storm, there is not a place four feet square that is not flooded. A mob could surprise and take the place at any time. There is no guard here. The men have almost been provoked enough to disband." Such is the testimony of the members, who are a fine soldierly body of gentlemen, some of them veterans of our own and foreign service.

The Dangers and Difficulties of Staten Island Travel—The Steamer Middletown Befogged—A Passenger's Experience.

Many complaints have been made of the inefficiency of the Staten Island Ferry-boat officials, as well as the insecure character of the boats in their charge. On Monday night, the steam-boat Middletown, Capt. SILVA, left her slip at the Quarantine Landing, Staten Island, at 10 o'clock, with a number of passengers on board, for New-York, and the night being very dark and hazy navigation was necessarily much more difficult than usual, and in the route of the Middletown to New-York no land-marks or lights were distinguishable from the pilot-house of the boat. After groping about from one shore to the other in the darkness for at least two hours, the Middletown found her way back to the wharf from whence she had started. One of the passengers, Mr. E. M. DENNISON, says that the Middletown, whose compasses were so much deranged that the magnet would not travel, after remaining at the slip but a few minutes, again put out into the stream. This time, he says, the Middletown appeared to him to be literally drifting about in the current, one moment backing, then going ahead, the Captain evidently having no knowledge whatever of the location of his vessel. The Middletown was thus occupied for fully two hours more when Capt. SILVA managed to find the Staten Island shore again, but this time at Clifton, two miles further from New-York than the slip from which they had started. The passengers now became impatient, and remonstrated with the officials, but were gruffly repulsed, and told to leave the boat if they did not like the manner in which the vessel was handled. Some of the passengers complied, vowing that they would hold the Company responsible for the neglect and incompetency of their officials; while others were determined not to be imposed upon, and claiming that they had paid their fare to New-York on the Middletown, and on that boat they intended to go, if they had to remain until morning. Mr. DENNISON says that those gentlemen who had resolved to have their rights sustained, were then forcibly ejected from the boat, without the slightest explanation or offer to refund the fares that had been received for the unaccomplished trip. Most of the passengers were of the Middletown is notoriously ignorant and incompetent, and is only a promoted fireman, who can neither read nor write. The expelled passengers of the Middletown were loud in their denunciations of the ferry-boat's officers, and were particularly indignant that the Company should permit the lives of thousands to be at the mercy of such incompetent men as they said Capt. SILVA and his subordinates proved themselves to be. Mr. DENNISON also says that Capt. SILVA and the pilot escaped from the exasperated passengers by concealing themselves in the pilot-house until Police officers were called in for their protection. An attache of the TIMES yesterday visited the Staten Island Ferry-boat office, in New-York, and found the agents very reticent. No one in the office could tell where Capt. SILVA was. At last a young man employed by the Company stated that he was out of town, having been relieved, according to the usual custom, at 12 o'clock meridian.

POLITICAL.

Third Assembly District Republican Association—Vote of Thanks to the Times.

The newly-organized Republican Association of the Third Assembly District held its first meeting last evening at No. 103 Elizabeth-street, Mr. HENRY KRUGER presiding. A letter was read from Commissioner JOHN J. DAVENPORT, inclosing a list of names for the Executive Committee, Committee on Admission and Committee on Finances, as selected according to agreement by Mr. FOLEY and Mr. SANDFORD. The Committees, as recommended by these gentlemen, were agreed to. The Executive Committee consists of twenty-four members, five of whom are colored voters.

On motion of Mr. JOHN FOLEY a vote of thanks was passed to Messrs. SCHULTZ and ORTON for their exertions in the reorganization of the Republican Party, and a further vote of thanks was passed to Commissioner DAVENPORT for the efficient manner in which he carried out the enrollment of the Republicans of the Third District.

Mr. JAMES FLEMING thought that the meeting should not adjourn without thanking the NEW-YORK TIMES for its able articles exposing the frauds of the Tammany Ring. He moved "that the thanks of this Association be given to the NEW-YORK TIMES for the very able manner in which it has exposed the frauds of the Tammany Ring." Mr. GEARY seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously, after which the meeting adjourned.

Disturbance of Religious Worship.

A novel case came up at the Court of Special Sessions, before Judge SHANDLEY, yesterday morning. It appeared that a Hebrew, named NATHAN KOYOFSKI, was complained of by Mr. ROBERT THOMAS, of the Alanson Methodist Episcopal Church, on Delancey-street, for disturbing their religious services on the Sabbath, by the noise he made while working on a sewing-machine in an adjoining building. He had been repeatedly requested to desist, but with no effect, and the congregation were at length obliged to appeal to law. The counsel for KOYOFSKI endeavored to show that any restriction of labor by the authorities, on account of the particular days which were chosen for worship or work, would be an infringement of fundamental American principles, and was, therefore, to be reprehended. The Judge said that the law stated explicitly that no one should willfully disturb religious worship, of whatever nature it might be, and that if the Hebrews were disturbed on Saturday, they would have an equally good right to complain. He, therefore, found the prisoner guilty, but suspended the sentence with the understanding that if he should be brought before him again on a similar charge, he would have to suffer the penalty.

Brutal Assaults.

MICHAEL BURKE, twenty-two years of age, of No. 300 East Fortieth-street, was attacked last night by JAMES CORCORAN at the corner of Fortieth-street and Second-avenue, and stabbed in the back. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital. The assailant escaped.

MICHAEL GIOVANTE, an Italian street-musician, eleven years of age, while in James-slip, near Water-street, last evening, was struck in the right eye and had the sight destroyed by JAMES CLARK, a drunken sailor. The injured boy was taken to Park Hospital, and CLARK was locked up.

DAVID ACKERMAN, of No. 242 Eighth-avenue, while at work last evening in the printing-house No. 18 Jacob-street, was dangerously stabbed by FRANK LAROZA, of Brooklyn, and was taken to Park Hospital. The assailant was arrested and locked up.

The Deltour Homicide.

An inquest was commenced, yesterday, by Coroner SCHIRMER in the case of JOHN DELTOUR, of No. 55 Hester-street, who died from injuries received by falling from a Second-avenue car at the corner of First-avenue and Fifth-street. There were several witnesses examined, but their testimony did not adduce any new facts, nor in any degree tend to solve the mystery attending the affair. It is clear that a disturbance arose between the driver, PATRICK FLOOD, and some drunken ruffians on the front platform, during which FLOOD was roughly used, and DELTOUR and THOMAS ORVENS accidentally pushed from the car, so that they fell under the wheels. Beyond this there was nothing developed by the examination, and no clue whatever has been obtained to the identity of the assailants. The inquest was adjourned for further testimony.

The Erie Railroad Company Sued for Overcharge of Fares — Judgment Against the Company.

The case of LUTHER C. HART vs. The Erie Railway Company is one of seven actions now pending in the Supreme Court to recover penalties for taking excessive fare in violation of an act of the Legislature of this State, entitled "An Act to prevent extortion by railroad companies," passed in 1857. Of it the Rochester Democrat says:

"It seems that the Buffalo, New-York and Erie Railroad Company, which was organized under the General Railroad law of the State, passed in 1850, originally constructed and operated the road running from Buffalo to Corning by the way of Avon. In 1863 this road was leased to the present Erie Railway Company for a term of 490 years, which Company has since been operating the road. The General Railroad act of 1850 limited the rate of passenger fare upon all roads organized under that act to three cents per mile. There are two stations upon the road, known as Livonia Station and South Livonia, the distance between which is less than four miles. While the road was being operated by the Buffalo, New-York and Erie Company, the fare between those two stations was ten cents. After the road came into the hands of the present 'Erie Railway' management, the fare was raised to fifteen cents. Residents of Livonia, who had occasion to go back and forth between Livonia Station and South Livonia almost daily, felt aggrieved at this increase of fare, and although they paid it without complaint for a long time, at length felt it their duty to protect their rights by enforcing the law which imposes a penalty of $50 against any railroad which asks or receives a greater rate of fare than that allowed by law. There are people in Livonia possessed of sufficient moral courage to compel even the present directors of the Erie Railway Company to obey the law. The plaintiffs in the seven suits above referred to having occasion to go back and forth upon business between these two stations almost every day, and frequently twice aday, have kept an account of the times they have been compelled to pay this excessive fare, for a period of about two months, and have brought these several actions to recover the aggregate penalties imposed by the law, amounting in all to about $40,000. It seems that since the commencement of these suits, the Railroad Company has reduced the fare to the legal rate.

The cases came up for argument on the 3d inst., at Geneseo, before Justice E. DARWIN SMITH, sitting at Special Term, upon a demurrer to the complaints. The complaints are in the usual form in actions to recover penalties, and the defendant interposed a general demurrer—'that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.' The seven cases were argued together by M. L. TOWNSEND, of New-York, of counsel for the plaintiffs, and by J. R. WARD, of Elmira, of counsel for the Company. The Judge upon the argument overruled the demurrers, and ordered judgment for the plaintiffs in every case. It is stated on high authority that the Company will protract litigation in these suits till next Winter, when application will be made to the Legislature for special legislation to meet the case. It is further alleged that other railroad corporations will assist Erie in this design, their interests being alike on this matter."
